Furious Fighting In Channel Diverts German Attention; All Invaders Return

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—British Commandos led by 30-year-old Lord Lovat caught the Nazis flat-footed about Boulogne on Dover Strait early today and spent two hours cutting communications, shooting up strong points and spying out the land before withdrawing with every man and all their weapons.

All in black-face, Commandos—representing 53 British regiments—had things pretty much their own way from the moment they waded ashore and shot the lone sentry who challenged them.

At this point, which might have been expected to be the strongest hold of any along the occupied coast of the continent, the Commandos penetrated the Nazi defenses along an 800-yard frontage, eyewitness accounts said.

Fire Over Raiders' Heads

The Germans detected the naval craft which had put the Commandos ashore, and a brisk battle ensued at sea—perfect cover for the Commando advance.

When the Nazis did wake up and start a tattoo of machine-gun fire enfilading the beach, much of it was over the raiders' heads, said some of the one-time game-keepers, woodsmen and deerstalkers who make up "Lovat's scouts."

The Commandos quickly cut communications and thus prevented a general alarm.

"We were lucky," said Lord Lovat, the fifteenth baron of that old Scottish family, who formed his own scout corps two years ago.

Germans Driven Back

It was only after the Commandos had left, taking their few casualties back to the boats with them, that the Germans lit the sky with signal flares and tracer bullets—too late.

Aside from whatever casualties were inflicted on the German coastal troops, two Nazi armed trawlers were knocked out by the British sea forces covering the operation.

The official announcement of the first Commando raid since the assault which tied up the Nazi submarine port of St. Nazaire on March 28 said:

"In the early hours of April 22 a small reconnaissance raid was carried out on the French coast near Boulogne.

"German troops holding this part of the coast were driven back before the advance of our troops.

"A British patrol penetrated the coastal defenses and withdrew after two hours. Casualties were very light.

German's First Report

"A naval force accompanying this reconnaissance engaged armed enemy trawlers. One German trawler was severely damaged and another was left on fire.

"No British ships were damaged in this engagement and naval casualties were slight."

Tonight, many hours after the raid, the German radio made this first report of the assault on the coast:

"Early on April 22, a fairly strong British unit attempted a landing on

The Sentry Spoke One Word

'Halten!'—Then Shots, Silence, Darkness, and Foray Is On

By Alan Humphreys

London, April 22—"Halten!"

This was the only word spoken by the torch-swinging German forming a one-man patrol—the first to challenge the Commandos—during their two-hour reconnaissance excursion near Boulogne early today.

Tommyguns spat.

The torch went out.

We heard no more.

Veiled in the night mist, the British craft crept silently inshore.

The Commandos plopped into the shallows and waded to the beach.

They were wearing action make-up, including black-face. All wore sneakers except one officer who had a pair of carpet slippers kept in place with elastic.

As he climbed over the side he muttered:

Invading in Comfort

"I intend to invade France in comfort."

While we were off the beach searchlights flickered nervously.

The Nazis were showing signs of disquiet.

As we advanced we could hear whistles, but instead of being met by machine gun fire the Commandos covered the several hundred yards to the safety of sand dunes at the top of the beach without incident.

Then there was action—but the Commandos were not involved.

It was the naval forces of light craft which had brought the Commandos on this job.

The little ships were lying off, waiting to bring the Commandos back. They were engaged by German antiaircraft and smaller craft.

Fireworks from the Sea

The Commandos were getting on with their assignment very quietly.

All the fireworks came from the sea. These fireworks also caught the attention of the German beach defenders.

Their suspicions had been aroused by the presence of our naval force.

They were so engrossed that the Commandos had swept across the sand and were at the beach wire before they met machine-gun fire.

We had the initiative until the moment when we withdrew—the Germans were always fighting where they were compelled to.

We penetrated the enemy defenses over a frontage of 800 yards.

Much of the machine-gun fire

Henry-Haye Remains

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

The rebellion against Pierre Laval in the French Embassy here continued late yesterday when the number of resignations among the staff grew to five.

The walkout, which may gain even more recruits, was an outraged protest against Laval's appeal to Frenchmen to embrace Hitler's New Order—this "on the very day when (French) hostages fell before the German firing squads."

The fifth resignation submitted to Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye was that of Etienne Burin des Roziers, second secretary of the embassy. A handsome young bachelor of 28, des Roziers plans to join the Free French navy.

Marchal Castigates Laval

Resignations disclosed earlier in the day were those of Leon Marchal, counselor of embassy; Baron James Baeyens, first secretary of embassy; Andre Fiot, vice consul, and Charles Benoit, of the embassy's code section.

Marchal immediately joined the Free French organization here, and in a blistering statement said that he was convinced from "official documents" that Marshal Petain would never have placed Laval in power had he not been forced to do so by German threats on "our unprotected compatriots."

There were reports that Ambassador Henry-Haye would resign, but these were not taken seriously.

Counselor Marchal, speaking only for himself through the Free French headquarters here, said:

"I cannot serve under the orders of Pierre Laval in whom I see the man appointed by Germany to rule France in the interest of the invader.

"My conviction is based on official documents from which it results that Marshal Petain would never have replaced Mr. Laval in power had he not been forced to do so by the threats which an enemy without faith nor honor imposed on our unfortunate compatriots.

Resistance Only Salvation

"The declarations which the head of the new Vichy government made yesterday have confirmed my resolution. It is hard to believe that the very day when new hostages fell before the German firing squad, a French voice should have absolved the aggressor of the crime of having brought about the war, in order to praise the most barbarous regime Europe has known since the start of Christianity, and in order to advocate a policy of confidence towards a country which has constantly betrayed all its promises and which knows no law other than that of brute force.

"The truth is that Germany and Germany alone is responsible for the sufferings of France today. It is Germany which by its looting, has

2½-5 Gal. Weekly Gas Ration Effective Here May 15; Order Tuesday to Fix Most Prices

Decree May Not Apply to Foods; Charges to Revert To March Level

By the Associated Press

A blanket freezing of virtually all prices at last month's levels probably will be proclaimed next Tuesday as part of the Administration's drastic anti-inflation program, authoritative sources said yesterday.

The price order, affecting retail, wholesale and factory prices, is to be announced by Administrator Leon Henderson, these sources said.

This would follow immediately upon the announcement by President Roosevelt of his comprehensive curbs for rising prices, expected next Monday. The price order would be a vital part of this program and represents abandonment of the technique of controlling prices by individual items, which many consider a failure, in favor of the plan advocated by Bernard Baruch, head of the War Industries Board in World War I.

The blanket price order would cover all consumer goods with the probable exception of food, it was authoritatively learned, and would permit sellers to charge the highest price which they charged in March but no higher.

The President placed the final formulation of his program ahead of all but the most necessary war tasks and instructed his secretaries to hold his appointments to a minimum—those of a "must" nature only—so that all the time possible could be devoted to what obviously is one of the most important statements of his more than nine years in the White House.

While many of his speeches and messages to Congress have had momentous effect upon the life of the Nation, the program now taking shape will affect in one way or another virtually every member of the civilian population.

The President's recommendations will go to Congress in a message, and the same evening, Mr. Roosevelt plans a radio address to the Nation.

Farmers Dissent

Wickard Approves Order To Stabilize Retail Milk Price

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard yesterday approved an amendment to the Washington milk marketing order which places cream and milk in the same producer-price class.

Strenuously opposed to this innovation, organized dairy farmers supplying the Capital and vicinity may let the Federal marketing order be suspended rather than ratify the amendment, it was reported last night.

Its purpose, as explained by the Agriculture Department, is to give producers greater financial returns without necessitating an increase in the retail price of milk. This would be done by boosting from $2.10 to $3.57 a hundredweight the price they receive for milk which is processed into cream.

See Price Increase

Simultaneously, several consumer groups made public a letter sent to Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator, urging that he establish a retail ceiling on milk in the District and supporting the amendment approved yesterday by Secretary Wickard.

Over 11 signatures, the letter protests that the local milk industry is planning another price increase even if the amendment, which would send fluid cream up but keep milk at the present level, is adopted.

To Combine Classes

"Because cream is a luxury product, we have no objection to the increased price necessary under the proposed amendment," said the letter. "However, the milk industry is not satisfied . . . The position on the part of local milk dealers is not without reason. The price paid for milk used for cream has been at a relatively lower level than that prevailing in other markets, though the retail prices were not lower. The margin of profit, therefore, on cream has made it a most attractive commodity to sell."

The signers called on Henderson, "in the interest of this overcrowded, overworked community, in the interest of taking every precaution against lowered resistance to disease, to use the authority with which you are empowered to prevent an increase in the retail price of milk to

Drivers to Register May 12, 13, 14; Some Relief Is Provided Those Needing More

And Sugar, Too

The Eastern Seaboard's 10 million motorists, including those in the District of Columbia, on May 15 will be placed under a gasoline rationing system providing a basic allowance of only 2½ to 5 gallons weekly per car.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced inauguration of the curtailment program late yesterday. It is intended as a stop-gap measure to bring about reduction of consumption quickly, while "a more elaborate and comprehensive coupon rationing system" is worked out to go into effect about July 1.

The exact allowance for each car under the temporary program will be announced before the effective date and will be determined by the supply situation just prior to May 15. Officials said, however, that it will not exceed 5 gallons per week and may be as low as 2½ gallons.

(Late last night the Associated Press quoted "a source close to Secretary Ickes" as saying that the 2½-gallon figure was "unwarrantedly pessimistic" and that the ration more likely would be around 25 gallons a month.)

Relief for Some Provided

Apparently thousands in the District area will be faced with the prospect of having to lay up their cars a considerable portion of the time, although some hope for those living considerable distances from their places of employment was seen in a statement by the Office of Price Administration that:

"Doctors, war workers and others whose vocations require mileage greater than that provided by the basic allowance may apply for supplemental cards."

Automobile owners will be issued gasoline rationing cards during a three-day registration period beginning May 12. Operators of trucks and other motor vehicles "easily recognized as commercial vehicles" will not be required to obtain ration cards and their purchases of gasoline will not be restricted.

Various Types of Cards

The registration will be conducted at elementary schools. The basic "A" card will be issued to the car owner upon presentation of his car registration card. The registrar will write his license number on the ration card and stamp it and the registration card so that the latter cannot be presented at another time for another ration card.

For those who can show their needs are greater than the basic allowance, cards "B1," "B2," and "B3" will be provided, with varying numbers of "unit squares." There will also be an "X" card for those whose gasoline needs, such as a doctor, subject to many calls, cannot be estimated in a definite number of miles.

Card of Seven Squares

OPA said the "A" card would resemble meal or commutation tickets and would contain seven squares, each representing a unit of gasoline which the ticket holder would be entitled to buy any time between May 15 and July 1.

Service station attendants will tear off, mark or punch a square for each unit of gasoline delivered to a ration card holder.

A motorist may, if he wishes, buy all of his ration card units at one time. However, if he uses up his card before July 1, he will not be issued another.

Registrants may appeal hardship cases to local rationing boards, and

Finns Suffer Grave Defeats, Reds Assert

Two Break-Throughs Reported by Russians On Northern Front

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, April 22.—The Russian Karelian armies, freshly reinforced by reserves, pushed through two break-throughs in the Finnish lines tonight in violent fighting, and Red army dispatches said the Finns had suffered grave defeats in an exhausting attempt to stem the Russian advance at any cost.

With the vast German-Russian front a quagmire in many sections, the northern battles, while not on a major scale, appeared to be the hardest and most significant.

(Helsinki dispatches attested to the ferocity of the Russian drive against the Finnish lines, although claiming that the Finns were standing firm. The Finnish dispatches said the Russians had made 150 attacks along the Svir River in two weeks, using six divisions, four brigades, an armored regiment, numerous ski battalions and other combat units, and lost 14,000 killed in terrible charges.

Seek to Free Railroad

(The main fighting is going on in the Svir River area of Karelia between Lakes Ladoga and Onega, and the primary Russian objective is to free the lower sections of the Murmansk railroad to clear the way for movement southward of United States and British supplies now accumulating at Murmansk.)

In one sector of a 3-day-old break-through, the Russians were widening the gap in small but sure advances; in another, where the Finns had fortified a town, a Red army unit found a weak spot at a junction of the Finnish troops, threw reserves into the breach and compelled the Finns to retreat with heavy losses in a night assault on the flank.

Not a Picnic

The following story of life on Corregidor Island in Manila Bay is an official dispatch to the War Department from the headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Wainwright and was released by the War Department.

Corregidor, P. I., April 22.—Constant bombing from the skies and crossfire of heavy artillery from Bataan and Cavite have failed to dampen the fighting spirit of the men on the island forts at the entrance to Manila Bay. These men—jungle-toughened doughboys, hard-hitting Marines and sailors, and ever-alert and ever-ready coast artillery and antiaircraft gunners from all walks of life and parts of the United States—just grin and bear it.

Their commander, Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, himself a hard-riding cavalryman, reports that there is not a "softie" in his outfit. They have suffered a lot of hardships and they know there are more ahead of them, but they pride themselves on the fact that they can take it. Life on Corregidor is not a Sunday school picnic. House Group Starts Work On Tax Bill

Declines to Await Roosevelt's Message; Treasury Data Asked

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means committee yesterday called for Treasury estimates on drastically increased excess profits taxation without waiting for the President's over-all anti-inflation program.

The committee decided to go to work as scheduled on the new seven to nine billion dollar tax program after the Treasury denied knowledge of additional war tax plans and committeemen remained in the dark.

Bond Plan Suggested

Anticipating White House recommendations for a far deeper bite into war profits than the Treasury's proposed excess profits tax maximum of 75 per cent, individual committee members called for a series of new estimates from the Treasury.

Yields on a plan to take all excess profits, and return 20 per cent to the taxpayer in the form of non-negotiable bonds, redeemable after the war, were requested by Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia.

In lieu of the Treasury's proposed 31 per cent war surtax (plus 24 per cent normal) on earnings not reached by the profits levy, Robertson asked yields on a 16 per cent war surtax plus 24 per cent normal tax on corporations earning over $25,000. Companies earning less would be surtaxed at 8 per cent, plus normal taxes, under the proposal.

Report Causes Flurry

This and other corporate tax plans, including a suggestion from committee staff tax experts, to raise the excess profits tax maximum rate to 90 per cent, retaining existing invested capital and average

Moonahan, 35, a strapping 6-foot 187-pounder, from Chevy Chase, was the 100,000th draftee to be received, classified and equipped at the reception center, and its commanding officers arranged a special ceremony in his honor.

Today as approximately 700 rookies, recently inducted men, were presented to the colors for the first time, Moonahan stood by the side of Col. Edward J. Rehmann, commanding officer of the center, and took the salutes of the men as they marched past in review.

Grand Jury to Act

An immediate Federal grand jury investigation of allegedly seditious activities of individuals and organizations in the Chicago area was ordered yesterday by the Justice Department.

District Attorney J. Albert Woll was instructed by Attorney General Biddle to determine whether the individuals and organizations there are interferring with successful prosecution of the war.

The announcement was made after the Attorney General had discussed sedition cases with President Roosevelt yesterday.

Other Investigations Forecast

"The investigation will seek to develop information," Biddle said, "concerning the origin, membership, finances, subsidies and activities of a number of organizations in the Chicago area, including the printing, circulation and methods of distribution of publications sponsored by such organizations, especially to determine whether they have attempted to influence members of the armed forces of the United States or persons affected by the Selective Service and Training Act."

Biddle said the inquiry would be similar to that being conducted by the Federal grand jury here which already has indicted a number of alleged propagandists.

Similar investigations in other sections are anticipated.

Prejudice Exists

Women's War Job Registration Deemed Premature at Present

Until employers and labor unions relax their views on the employment of women, registration of those available for war work will not serve a specific purpose, in the opinion of the Labor Supply Section of the War Production Board.

"They will do that when the need is acute, which it is not right now, in our opinion," Thelma McKelvey of the section said yesterday.

Utilization of women workers in the war production areas should be done on a local supply basis before a Nationwide registration is needed, she believes. In New York City, she pointed out, approximately 400,000 women are out of work—but no war contracts for that city are foreseen to take up that slack. For them to register now would do little if any good, since the WPB is opposed to moving any more workers into an area than are definitely needed after the local supply has been exhausted. This is because housing facilities in the war areas already are overtaxed.

The Women's Bureau is similarly opposed to the registration of women until the unemployed and disemploy slacks are taken up. Mary Anderson, director of the bureau, said that if the war effort is accelerated this might be at the end of 1942.

Only one State has registered women to date. That is Oregon, which has not utilized the information gained because ship building is the biggest war industry and ship builders are slow to accept women workers.

When registration came too early in England, Miss Anderson said, it caused a lag in interest. Her opinion is that morale suffers when someone registers and "gets pepped up" about taking a job and no job is there.

Mother Tells of Drugging Son, 4, to Save Him From Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—Anthony Haden Guest, who at 4½ years is the youngest prisoner of war ever known to escape from the Germans, held a press conference this afternoon, and took a few liberties with it, as is understandable in a young man who has spent months behind barbed wire and on slim rations.

"Don't forget I speak English," Anthony stated at the beginning. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Haden Guest, interrupted to remark that he certainly did speak English—so constantly that in escaping from the Germans she had to keep him drugged for four days and nights to prevent his language from giving them away.

Anthony at this point disappeared under the table and laughed gleefully as he pinched the ankles of women reporters present.

Finally he came out when offered chocolate ice cream, leaving his mother to carry on.

She said her husband, Peter, was in New York and young Anthony was in Brittany when the German invasion started May 10, 1940.

Ex-Convict Bared as Brains Of War Contract Swindle

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

A former convict, specialist in forgery and confidence games, whose last known place of incarceration was the District Jail, yesterday was revealed as the brains of a war contracts swindle to which such personages as former Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts unwittingly lent their names.

The crazy-quilt pattern of the most bizarre story yet to come to light in a series of war scandals was spread before the Truman Investigating Committee in the Senate chiefly as the result of an appeal to the committee by one of the forger's associates for aid in advancing one of his undertakings. These ventures, it appeared, were purposely vague, but had to do with phoney housing contracts and aluminum production.

The former convict was identified as James George Fuller whose criminal record with the Federal Bureau of Investigation covers 13 com-

15 French Hostages Die; Hero Is Freed

Nazis Liberate French Hero

GEN. R. J. A. PRIOUX, the one French hero of the Battle of France, has been freed from a Nazi prison camp. Prioux, who was captured on the River Lys May 29, 1940, made a sacrificial stand which helped the British to escape at Dunkerque

General Released; Move Believed Bid For Backing of Laval

By the Associated Press

Vichy, April 22.—The Germans freed today the one French hero of the Battle of France, Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux, whose sacrificial stand enabled the British to escape at Dunkerque, but at the same time they announced execution of more than 15 hostages in reprisal for the continued assassination of German soldiers.

Eighty Frenchmen will be shot tomorrow at Rouen unless those responsible for the wrecking of a Nazi troop train there April 16 surrender voluntarily or are arrested by French authorities. Thirty already have been shot for that bit of sabotage in which "a large number" of German soldiers were killed.

It was announced officially that 63-year-old General Prioux had been released from captivity and returned to France "for reasons of health." (But it appeared that the Germans and Pierre Laval, new chief of the Vichy government, had decided on this as a bid for popular French support for further "collaboration.")

By contrast, Lieut. Gen. Ernst von Schaumburg, Germany military commander of Paris, disclosed in a grim proclamation dated yesterday that five hostages "responsible through solidarity" for the killing of a German soldier and the bombing of German army offices April 2 had been shot and that the same fate had befallen 10 others for the killing of a member of the German army on the Rue Erlanger in Paris last Monday.

In a supplemental proclamation he said French civilians since had arrested and handed over the "authors" of the latest attack; and that as a result he was rescinding an order which would have sent 20 more whom he termed "Communists and Jews" before a firing squad.

He also permitted immediate reopening of Paris theaters and amusement resorts which had been closed, and moved the curfew back to its normal midnight hour.

He allowed to stand, however, an order for execution of 15 "other Communists" if the perpetrators of the April 2 attack were not apprehended by April 26, and said "500 Communists and Jews" would be deported "to the east to carry out forced labor in camps."

French efforts were being made to obtain release of at least some of the 20 hostages held by the Germans since the British Commando raid on St. Nazaire last month—notably Jean Blanchard, an important labor leader. Francois Blancho, mayor of St. Nazaire, was released a few days ago.

General Prioux, who is being freed from a German war prisoner camp, has been held since he and his staff were captured on the River Lys May 29, 1940—after an heroic stand of four days which enabled the British Expeditionary Force and many French troops to escape the German trap and reach England by sea.

General Prioux had formed a cavalry corps composed of the second and third light mechanized divisions into a hollow square which threw back repeated attacks. Then, three days before his capture, he was given command of the First Army, but the situation by then was so hopeless that his first order was to burn the flags to keep them from German hands.

War Sidelights

Terror Grips Madagascar Under Laval

London, April 22 (INS).—A reign of terror has swept Madagascar, giant French island, 240 miles off the southeast coast of Africa in the Indian Ocean, following orders from Pierre Laval, the London Daily Express reported tonight from Antananarivo, capital of the island.

Hundreds of Free French followers were said to have been arrested since Japanese warships broke into the Indian Ocean, while local police were stated to be performing their duties under the close surveillance of Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo agents.

These agents are now trying to round up all known De Gaulle sympathizers on the strategic island, it was said.

It is known that the Japanese already have formed a strong fifth column movement in the area.

The dispatch to the Daily Express, first news from Madagascar in many months, was sneaked off the island by courier to Durban, South Africa, and thence to London by cable.

Gestapo agents were sent to Madagascar from South Africa to watch every move made by Gov. Gen. Annet, the paper said. Annet is the successor to Gov. Decoppet, who was recalled a year ago after declaring his intention to fight on the side of the United Nations.

Nazi Bombers Keep Balkans At Semi-Peace

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—Only Hitler's threat to level Budapest and Bucharest with bombing planes is keeping Rumania and Hungary from war over the "barter province" of Transylvania, a diplomat with long experience in the Balkans who just has come out of Rumania said tonight.

This informant, now in London on a new assignment, outlined a situation in which, he said, the old quarrels and jealousies which the Germans exploited in 1940 to bring Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria under the German wing are now among the most serious impediments to the German "new order" in the Southeast and to German military plans against Russia.

The chief concern of the Germans in Rumania just now is Julius Maniu, the old-time peasant leader who is secure in the position of idol of the Transylvanian peasantry, the diplomat said. Maniu has publicly demanded that Premier Antonescu withdraw the Rumanian troops in Russia south of the Dniester River and prepare for war with Hungary to regain that part of Transylvania which was lost to Hungary in the German award of Vienna in 1940.

Keeps Aid from Nazis

Thus Maniu was described as keeping the Germans from getting the Rumanian troops they want in Russia.

The Gestapo and the Antonescu police have arrested hundreds of Maniu's young supporters in an attempt to isolate the peasant leader from his following, but they do not dare to the touch the man who broke the back of King Carol's regime by simply refusing to cooperate with it, the diplomat said.

Rumania already has lost 250,000 of the original 800,000 men thrown into the Russian campaign, the diplomat affirmed, and these winter casualties have touched every family in the nation. Moreover, he said, the Rumanians are discouraged with the big war since the United States entered it, "and the only enthusiasm they have is for war with Hungary."

Rumanians Seek Deal

The informant disclosed that certain Rumanian officials approached United States diplomats before they left the country after the United States entered the war and tried, without success, to make a deal whereby the United States would guarantee Rumania's post-war boundaries against any Russian demands, in return for which Rumania would try to withdraw the military aid given Hitler.

Rumania was declared by the diplomat to be financing the war through inflation, in which the lei has risen on black markets to 1000 to a dollar in contrast to the official rate of 220.

Despite her current troubles, he added, Germany has done wonders with oil transport from Rumania and boosted the production of the Rumanian fields to 4,500,000 tons a year—virtually all of which is going to the German armies.

The German plan, he said, is to use the great refineries of Ploesti as a refining base for Russian oil if they capture the Caucasus and find the Soviet refineries in ruins.

work with the British-American Ambulance Corps in Paris and rejoin her child in Brittany, all escape routes were cut off.

"It took us six hours to walk and crawl through the line of demarcation into Unoccupied France," she said. "Tony was very good about it. Because he speaks English all the time, I gave him drugs to keep him quiet on the train we took from Paris.

"Crawling through the lines, I had him on a sort of harness. I was ahead, and when we had to turn to the right through the maze of barbed wire, I would give a little tug on the rein on that side and Tony would follow me.

"When I told him he never would have another Christmas tree or birthday cake, that there would be nothing but German soldiers unless he kept quiet, he promised he would. 'It was quite an ordeal to get him through.

"The half of him that wasn't drugged was normally curious and was always on the point of wondering out loud about such things as dogs barking.

"The Germans have lots of dogs on the demarcation line, but a friend coated us with some smelly stuff that is supposed to throw them off the scent in case they pick up your trail.

"As for the sentries, well, there was nothing to it but to be extra careful.

"Each one patrols a stretch of 50 yards to and fro and you have to move when they are definitely fro."

Mrs. Guest said she remained in Brittany until August, 1940, and watched Saxon regiments training for the invasion of England with "rubber boats and all that." Then she and the boy were taken to Dinan Prison Camp. In October they were transferred to Lemens at the edge of a German airdrome which was bombed by the R. A. F. Next they were shipped in bitter December weather in a cattle train to Besancon, a place of internment for dissident French.

"We women had to take off our clothes to keep the children warm on the train. At camp we had to melt ice and snow to wash them," she said.

Through intervention of the Red Cross, they were moved to Paris, where "Tony and I managed to step out of line and lose ourselves in the crowd."

They stayed there several months before they started for the unoccupied zone.

"The French today are living for the moment they are freed and they especially want Americans and Canadians to be the ones to do it," she said. "I am sure Laval, whom they loathe, will be the rallying point of their opposition to Vichy."

At this point Tony, a grandson of Leslie Haden Guest, a member of Parliament, reappeared, declared the ice cream "very good," and the interview was over.

the French coast at Boulogne.

"The attempt was frustrated by the watchfulness of the German coastal defense.

"Immediate fire from a pillbox forced the British to retreat.

"The enemy retreated to the sea under cover of artificial fog. British arms and equipment were left littered on the beach.

"The enemy suffered heavy losses and retreated without being able to accomplish his objective."

An earlier German broadcast said merely that the British had lost one speedboat in a brush with German minesweepers south of Boulogne.

Whatever the physical result, something more important than military installations seemed to have been damaged, specifically, any German confidence that the Channel position was strong enough to prevent the possible opening of a second front if the main Nazi forces are thrown against Russia later in the spring.

30 Miles From Britain

Boulogne is less than 30 miles from Dungeness on the English Coast and it had been naturally assumed that since that part of the coast must figure largely in any defensive scheme for northern France the Germans had strong land forces and many fighter squadrons in the area.

Thus the failure of the Germans to gather sufficient force to drive the raiders into the sea was regarded here as indicating that something was radically lacking in the Nazi defenses.

The two-hour stay also afforded the British ample time to survey German fortifications although there was no mention of demolitions in the raid.

This bold attack was delivered soon after Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt had taken command of all Nazi troops in northern France, and following upon reports that the German garrisons had been heavily reinforced from North Cape to the Bay of Biscay.

The defenses along the Boulogne coastal area, which have been frequently battered by the R. A. F. are comparable to others farther south and north.

These latter consist of a series of strong points along the coast, backed by blockhouses and mine fields, but the main support is believed to lie in German armored columns posted 20 to 50 miles inland.

Nazis Preparing Elaborate Defenses

London, April 23 (U.P.).—The economic warfare ministry said today that, exemplifying German fears of a continental invasion, the Nazi-occupation authorities in France had ear-marked one-half of French cement production, or 50,000 tons a year—for new coastal defenses.

Vichy dispatches said the Paris newspaper Le Matin reported today that German Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the German fleet, inspected the naval base at St. Nazaire and visited Germans wounded in the British Commando attack.

Other Paris papers were reported to have announced German plans for speeding up construction of an elaborate system of permanent defenses along the whole length of the French seacoast. The Paris Midi printed photographs of a concrete casemate under construction among the dunes of the north coast for use of troops guarding against invading planes or ships.

President's Ancestral Home Is for Sale

Fairhaven, Mass., April 22 (AP).—The Warren Delano homestead, a 30-room Victorian dwelling occupied by the maternal ancestors of President Roosevelt since it was built in 1832, is for sale.

Frederick A. Delano and Mrs. Price Collier of New York, brother and sister of the President's mother, came here today to arrange disposal of the property and most of its contents.

Eyewitness Tells of Raid By Commandos on France

was enfilading the beach over the heads of our men.

As it dawned on them that a raid was being made the Germans fired a shower of Very lights.

British patrols went out and contacted enemy strong points, cutting communications and thereby preventing reinforcements being sent for.

"The pillboxes had not the slightest idea where we were and what we were doing," said one patrol leader.

It was remarkable from a military point of view that after spending two hours on enemy-occupied territory every man was withdrawn with arms.

Our casualties were negligible.

Unlike some commandos, this particular unit had no geographical or regimental affinity.

There were 53 regiments represented, including the Lovat Scouts and the Royal Ulster Rifles.

Many of the commandos took part in the first Lofoten raid little over a year ago.

Their Luck Held Out

Lord Lovat, who commanded the raid, told me:

"We were lucky. During our advance to the sand dunes we might have had to face machine-gun fire."

The "we were lucky" theme was expressed by most of the men.

A 21-year-old captain from Glasgow who came through Dunkerque said:

"We ought to have been cleaned up but we were not.

"My sergeant had a very neat miss when some of their stuff fell about 6 inches from him.

"It was the wit' drawal, like all withdrawals, which was the most difficult part of the operation."

It was the navy which brought the commandos to the exact spot at the exact time.

Soon after the commandos had left, signal lights winked and then came streams of tracer bullets from all directions.

For many minutes the sky was lit up by a fierce exchange of fire between the escort craft and attacking German flak ships and smaller craft.

Shrapnel burst all around. Navy guns barked an effective reply—so effective that in the darkness a voice shouted, "She's smoking."

"She" was a German flak ship which was slinking off, on fire.

The naval battle in miniature ended as abruptly as it had begun.

With the "cease fire," an eerie silence and the darkness of "commando night" descended.

Then came the rendezvous with the returning commandos.

Hitler's Mustache Singed

Slowly sweeping in the direction from which they should appear, the ships scoured the sea.

At last, against a pearly gray sea and sky of early morning came the black shapes of the landing craft.

We saw them at last clearly, still black-faced, waving and smiling, with their teeth gleaming against the dusk.

Writer Tells of Rigors of Nazi Prison Camp, Recounts How He Outwitted Gestapo, Escaped

This is the second chapter of Kurt Kokorniak's dramatic story of escape from a German prison camp. In this instalment, he tells how he managed his final escape from the Gestapo.

By Kurt Kokorniak

(Distributed by International News Service with Special Permission of "London Calling." Copyright, 1942.)

London, April 22 (INS).—Sueplingen camp is near Magdeburg (about 77 miles southwest of Berlin). There were 11 of us in the consignment. When we arrived we were beaten out of the lorry with rubber truncheons. We had to kneel on a triangular piece of wood until all our heads had been shaved in turn. Then we were made to stand at attention for six hours in the burning sun.

We had had nothing to eat for 24 hours; those who fell down were beaten till they stood up. Camp leaders and SS men were running all round us like raging devils.

The same afternoon we went for the first time to the quarry where we were to work henceforth. We still hadn't had a bite in our mouths. Our clothes were taken away from us; each of us was given an old pair of trousers, but neither shoes nor shirts. Then came the most horrible process—we had chains put on our legs. We had to wear these chains day and night; at night, too, we were fastened by the hands to our beds.

Sixteen hours of forced labor in the quarry was our daily portion. The SS people hit out at us like slave drivers. Falling stone caught us on the chest and face. The sun and the stone dust raised large blisters on our skin.

Four Hours' Sleep

Our daily food ration consisted of 250 grammes of bad bread, a spoonful of marmalade and, at midday and in the evening, a few potatoes in their skins. We started at 2 o'clock in the morning, and work in the quarry went on till 8 o'clock in the evening; and after that there were frequently some so-called light jobs—shoveling coal for the bakehouse, loading stones, cleaning boilers, etc. At 10 o'clock in the evening we were allowed to be fastened to our beds and to have four hours' sleep.

In all, I spent 21 days at Sueplingen. From the very first day I had only one thought: escape. It seemed impossible; but I told myself that there wasn't a prison in the world from which determined people hadn't already broken out. I told myself, too, that I MUSN'T MAKE the mistake of overestimating the Gestapo. People whose spirit has been broken by long imprisonment and ill-treatment often make this mistake.

I was an airplane fitter for 11 years. I understand tools and locks. The first thing, then, was to get myself tools.

Ten days after my arrival I had an unexpected stroke of luck. The camp leader's car had broken down. I was told to repair it. It ing stones, cleaning boilers, etc. and in the process I was able to steal a three-edged file, a pair of pliers, and a half yard of steel wire.

Made Skeleton Keys

I left them lying in the grass overnight. When we marched out to the quarry at 2 o'clock the next morning I took them with me. While the blasting took place in the quarry the S S took cover, which we were not allowed to do.

Each blasting operation gave me about five minutes without a guard. I used the time to make skeleton keys out of the steel wire. In a week I had three skeleton keys. I hid them under my clothes. Now all I had to do was wait for a favorable moment.

The barrack stood in a rectangular piece of ground, surrounded with barbed wire. Owing to the danger of air raids there was a total blackout inside and outside the barrack. In each corner of the rectangle of barbed wire there were several sentry-boxes. An SS man was posted in each of the sentry boxes and patrolled up and down along the barbed wire at regular intervals. There was also a bloodhound chained at the narrow, northern side of the barrack.

On the night of July 18 my preparations were finished. It was a stormy night, with thick clouds, and so pitch dark that I couldn't have wanted it any better. Toward midnight it had become perfectly quiet in the barrack, except for the snoring of the 40 prisoners and their guards. With my skeleton key I unpicked first my hand-chain, then my foot-chain. My heart was beating madly.

I crawled across the floorboards to the door, stretched out on my belly. It was so dark that I couldn't see my hands before my face. I moved along at a snail's pace. I don't remember what I was thinking and feeling; all I can recall is that the wooden splinters and the nails of the floor cut my flesh.

At last I reached the double door. The skeleton key opened the first door, then the second. I locked them both again from outside. Now I was in the open air. Again I crawled along on my belly, this time over gravel. It was about 30 feet to the barbed wire. I crawled straight to the nearest sentry box; the guard was having a chat with his colleague in the second sentry box.

Had to Retrieve Clothes

I squeezed myself in between the back of the sentry box and the barbed wire. Then I carefully began to unravel the cross-wires of the fence. Before I had finished the guard came back into the sentry box. I heard him breathing, he was so close. Then he went away again. I had got two cross wires undone and slipped through.

Now I was outside, but wearing only my torn army trousers. At all costs I had to retrieve, first, my clothes and, second, my Spanish papers. The building where the prisoners' property was kept lay outside the entanglement. It was a wooden barrack, containing the sleeping quarters of the SS men, the kitchen and the storerooms. I had the plan of the camp clearly in my head, and I knew, too, where the sack was that contained my clothes and my papers.

About 1:30 in the morning I was ready to make my escape. I was wearing normal clothes and had even got back my wallet, my watch and my pocket compass; as well as sausage and bread from the SS storeroom which would last me five or six days. At sunrise I was in Magdeburg. On the way—in the toolshed of the little railway station at Horsingen—I found an old bicycle. I apologize now to the owner. Perhaps he will forgive me when he hears that his old bike helped an anti-Nazi to escape. Perhaps he will even be glad.

I now had a bicycle, 10 marks and food for 5 or 6 days. My plan was to sleep during the day in woods or in a barn, and to travel at night. I had no papers except my Spanish ones, which were useless. If a patrol or a controller stopped me, I was done for. And my objective was Gibraltar—2500 kilometers to go and five frontiers to cross.

(Tomorrow: Kurt Kokorniak tells how he crossed the first and most dangerous frontier.)

U. S.-Aussie Raiders Set Rabaul Aflame

Crash at Sea

Plane Crew Finds War Adventurous

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

An Advanced Allied Air Base in Australia, April 22.—The bomber was about an hour out of Rabaul on its way back home after attacking several Japanese ships in port. One motor sputtered and died. A minute later the second also expired and the plane plunged into the sea.

Thus, a few days ago, began an adventure they hadn't counted on for the plane's light-hearted crew.

They escaped from the ship, made friends with a gang of knife-brandishing natives, and finally were picked up by an American flying boat.

Here is their story, as told by Second Lieut. Gene R. Dreasher, 28-year-old bombardier from Brawley, Calif., as he lay in a hospital recovering from severe leg lacerations:

"At Rabaul I saw three direct hits right on the bridge of a big transport and know that at least one was mine. Some other ships were hit too.

Then Motors Went Dead

"After we turned back to the base one motor started spitting and went out.

"In another minute the second motor went dead and I came out of the bombardier's place in the nose like a rabbit—crawling between the copilot's legs. He said I nearly took him out of his seat.

"I just had time to get a parachute on (bombardiers never wear parachutes except in an emergency because they are too cumbersome). I started to grab an instrument which I thought I had better try to save, but didn't quite get my hands on it.

"We hit.

"The next thing I knew my legs were pinned. The plane was under about 4 feet of water.

"I jerked my legs loose and I guess that's how they got cut.

Head Held Under Water

"I started out of the copilot's hatch—and the parachute caught, holding my head under 2 feet of water.

"Mister, that's some sensation.

I jerked loose again and got out and resolved then and there never to put on a parachute again.

Then the tail tilted up and the plane went down about a minute and a half after the crash.

"The navigator, Lieut. Robert Kenyon, of Walla Walla, Wash., got a two-man raft open and we all hung on. We were about a mile from a little island, and the current was carrying us out to sea. Another plane in our flight dropped two rafts, but they were too far away.

"We yelled and whistled at some natives, and two came out in a dug-out outrigger canoe.

Taken Ashore First

"I was passing out about every 15 minutes from loss of blood, so they took me ashore first. Three more canoes went for the others.

"The black natives, none of them more than 5 feet tall, wore G-strings or grass skirts and carried 18-inch knives and little axes which they slung around their necks.

"They were friendly but spoke no English. They treated us like a bunch of sick kids, gave us coconuts and sugar cane and poured cold water on our wounds. When it rained, they put the injured in a cave.

"Bob Kenyon had a big time teaching one man to speak English. He finally gave it up, saying:

'Gene, this guy is a ——.'

"The native pointed at Kenyon and said, 'You Bob,' and then at himself, 'Me a ——.'

Flying Boat Saved Them

"We had been on the island about four hours when a flying boat picked us up. A few hours later we received our first medical attention.

"We didn't see any sharks when we crashed, but they were not far away—the flying boat crew said they saw 60 or 70 at the scene of the crash when they came in."

Close Cooperation Of Forces Stressed By MacArthur

By the United Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, April 22.—The merged American-Australian air force, stepping up its new offensive, left the Japanese base at Rabaul aflame after a blistering raid Tuesday, while an enemy attack on Port Moresby was beaten off and four planes shot down, United Nations headquarters announced today.

Many fires raged among the wharves and buildings at Rabaul in the wake of the Allied bombers blasting for the second time in three days at the main Japanese post on New British Island, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced in his second communique.

Defensive as well as offensive honors went to the Allies. Eight Japanese bombers struck at the New Guinea base of Port Moresby and were routed with a loss of four of their escorting navy zero fighters without a single casualty among the defense forces.

Even the reserved Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, Allied air commander, was enthusiastic over the work of his "boys up north." After inspecting the air forces in northern Australia, he said "everything is on the up and up now," and added:

"The boys up there are doing a hell of a fine job raiding Rabaul and Salamaua, and I am all the more confident now that they are getting things done."

The Sidney Morning Herald said editorially that the Japanese soon "will be forced to dispatch many more aircraft to this distant region or decide whether their advanced positions are tenable under the constant raids."

MacArthur's communique, for the first time referring to "our air force," underscored the fusion of the United States and Australian units into a single fighting machine.

So Col. Halquire Has $15,000—and Ritter's Quite Sad

New York, April 22 (AP).—Strolling carefree somewhere under benign spring skies is Col. Hale Heatherington Halquire whose spirits, police say, are buoyed by the knowledge he has somebody else's $15,000 in his pocket.

The 78-year-old portly colonel is accused of fleecing Louis Ritter by posing as an "important lobbyist in Washington."

Twenty thousand circulars broadcast today throughout the United States told the sad tale of misplaced trust:

The colonel—234 pounds of pomp—approached Ritter, a fur dealer here, and invited his help in financing the building of plants to manufacture war materials.

Impressed, Ritter joined him in inspecting several Newark, N. J. plants. Then Ritter on a day of bitter memory—November 20, 1940—forked over $15,000 to start operations. The colonel, the $15,000 and the golden dreams of fat Government contracts vanished together, police said.

Malta Defenders Hit 37 Axis Planes

Valletta, April 22 (AP).—At least 37 Axis planes were destroyed or damaged in heavy enemy thrusts at airdromes and the harbor area on this British island base yesterday and today, it was reported tonight.

Three raids were made today and the British said three German planes were destroyed and four damaged. Thirty planes—17 bombers and 13 fighters—were reported destroyed or damaged during daylight raids yesterday.

Halifax Bomber Carries Big Load

London (Thursday), April 23 (AP).—The R. A. F.'s four-engined Halifax, which has been in the forefront of the British aerial offensive against Germany, has a maximum bomb-load of 5½ tons, a maximum range of 3000 miles and a maximum speed of 300 miles per hour, it was disclosed today.

Specifications of the big bomber had been kept secret since it entered operations in the final months of 1940.

Togo Warns Japan to Be Ready For Counterattack by U. S.

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts) (Thursday), April 23.—Foreign Minister Togo today warned the Japanese to be prepared against any emergency because "the United States will constantly seek the opportunity for staging a counterattack."

The foreign minister addressed a meeting of the Japanese economic federation.

With Germany and Italy now fully prepared to launch powerful offensive drives against Britain and the United States, he said, the position of the United Nations would be further weakened.

Togo predicted that "Japan and her Axis allies will soon deal the knockout blow on the old order in the world to make way for the new order based upon justice and equality for all."

He said the Japanese-Russian neutrality pact would be adhered to and declared the recently renewed fishing agreement with Russia was "ample proof of the amicable relations existing between the two nations."

The Kremlin is too wise to pick chestnuts out of the fire for the sake of the Anglo-United States," he said.

Tokyo Raiders Captured In China, Japs Claim

Japanese army spokesmen in Tokyo and Shanghai were quoted by European radio stations yesterday as saying that several American airmen who raided Japanese cities last Saturday had been captured in the occupied zone of China after making emergency landings.

Fearing Raids, Japs Bomb Chinese Fields

Chungking, April 22 (U.P.).—Japanese planes bombed China air fields again today in a continuation of their effort to wipe out bases from which planes might take off for aerial attacks on Tokyo such as those carried out last Saturday, the Central News Agency reported.

Two flights of Nipponese aircraft ranged over the China airdromes, dropping both high explosive and incendiary bombs, it was said. Yushan, East Kiangsi Province and Chunchow, West Chekiang Province, were subjected to particularly heavy attacks.

Argentine Ship Undoubtedly Sunk by Axis Torpedo, Navy Says

By the Associated Press

A Navy spokesman said yesterday that the nature of the explosions which damaged the Argentine motor ship Victoria 800 miles off Cape Hatteras indicated beyond doubt "that the ship was torpedoed by an Axis vessel."

The Victoria incident was announced by the Argentine government Tuesday and in Buenos Aires it was said the vessel had either struck a mine or been torpedoed.

"There were apparently two explosions," the naval spokesman asserted. "In an area that far from land there would be no mine fields.

"If they were floating mines or mines which had broken loose from their anchorage, it is extremely unlikely that two of them would have appeared in such great proximity. This would indicate there was no doubt that the ship was torpedoed by an Axis vessel."

Evidence of Lawlessness

The Vitoria incident was cited by Secretary of State Hull as additional evidence of the utterly lawless conduct of Axis nations.

The Secretary made the declaration when asked to comment on the case in view of Argentina's neutrality. He did not elaborate.

Argentina and Chile are the only two American republics that have not severed relations with or declared war against the Axis. Both have had vessels attacked by submarines in the Atlantic.

Played Tag 12 Hours With U-Boat, Crew Says

New Orleans, April 22 (AP).—Survivors of a United States merchant vessel torpedoed and sunk April 12 in the Caribbean told here today how their ship played for 12 hours with a submarine, trying unsuccessfully to ram it, before the U-boat won.

The only person missing among the 5 passengers and 38 crew was the ship's physician, Dr. Benjamin A. Price, 64, formerly county health officer of Jefferson County, Idaho.

Price was seen aboard the ship as it plunged to the bottom after taking three torpedoes into its hull during the submarine's midnight attack.

Thirty-nine survivors, in lifeboats and on rafts, were picked up by a United Nations warship and landed at Jamaica, coming here later on a transport. The other survivors were landed at Haiti.

Warned by Plane

Naval officers pieced together this story from survivors' accounts:

Steaming through the Caribbean April 11, the ship was warned by a high-flying plane, believed to be a passenger plane, that the submarine was trailing her. The vessel picked up speed and zigzagged to elude the U-boat until twilight, when the sub was sighted.

The merchantman headed for the raider, which apparently crash-dived to escape.

Through the darkness the deadly game continued until just after midnight, when two torpedoes struck the after part of the ship about a minute apart. The vessel listed heavily to starboard.

Passengers and crew had time to abandon ship before the third torpedo hit and the merchantman went down.

After 18 hours adrift on a calm sea a group of survivors in two lifeboats and two rafts was picked up by the warship. The other survivors had gone off in a power boat and later were reported landed at Haiti.

Nothing was seen of the submarine after the attack, although some crewmen said it flashed its lights, apparently signaling. They said they did not answer the signal, fearing it was a trick to determine location of their boats.

War Strategy Faltering, Says British Peer

By the Associated Press

London, April 22.—Lord Strabolgi, labor leader in the House of Lords, said today that the "fact the British first sea lord and other important staff officers had had to leave London to go back to Washington with General Marshall" showed there was a "gap in the machinery" of United Nations war strategy.

(Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound is Britain's first sea lord. Lord Strabolgi's statement was the first indication that he had come to the United States. When Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, returned from London last Sunday he was accompanied by four persons, still not identified by official United States sources, but presumed to be high British officers.)

Lord Strabolgi said the fact that Marshall had had to visit London also was an indication of a lack of machinery for mobilizing and directing United Nations resources.

"There is some anxiety," he said, "as to whether there is a unified direction of the strategy of the grand alliance.

"Presumably the combined chiefs of staff committee in Washington, which includes senior British officials of all three services, is primarily concerned with the war in the Pacific," he added, and asked: "But is there a corresponding body for correlating plans and advising the governments concerned for a European battlefield?"

He also said there were "evidences that there could be closer cooperation in the higher field of strategy with Russian leaders."

The Earl of Selborne, minister of economic warfare, replied that there was "collaboration between England and America such as never has been seen between two countries before."

French Foe of Munich Calls U. S. 'Great Hope' of Nation

The United States is the "great hope" of the French people, Henri de Kerillis, former member of the French Chamber of Deputies and now a prominent member of the Free French organization, said on a visit to Washington yesterday.

DE KERILLIS

M. de Kerillis has been called the Winston Churchill of France. He was the only member of the French parliament, aside from the Communists, to vote against Munich, and he consistently warned that Hitler planned to war on France.

He was interviewed yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, where he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Conan Doyle. Ninety per cent of the French people, he said, were opposed to Germany. The other 10 per cent, he said, was not necessarily pro-German, he said, explaining that it was resigned to cooperation with Germany because of France's defeat.

"Great Friends of U. S."

"You can be sure," he said, "that the French people are the great friends of the United States. There are some Frenchmen who dislike Great Britain, others who dislike Russia. But you can't find a true Frenchman who does not like the United States.

"The French have no fear of America. They have a sentimental feeling about it, and they look upon it as their great hope.

"That gives you an important psychological weapon if you know how to use it. From that standpoint, your position is exceptionally good."

What did M. de Kerillis mean? How should the United States use the important psychological weapon? He declined to answer, saying that he would not presume to tell the United States what it ought to do.

Other Free Frenchs, however, say that the answer is clear: Break off diplomatic relations with Vichy, now dominated by Pierre Laval, looked upon by the Free French as Hitler's gauleiter in France.

Asked about the French fleet, M. de Kerillis said that there was an immediate danger that the Germans might take it over. He said that the business of purging pro-British officers in the French navy had been going on for some time. Moreover, he said, German sailors in the guise of "tourists" have been in French ports waiting for the signal to board the French warships.

M. de Kerillis is now associated with Genevieve Tabouis in editing Pour La Victoire, a weekly published in New York City.

created famine in France. It is Germany which seeks to divide Frenchmen by lies and treason. It is Germany who wants to throw us into the war again opposing us to our comrades in arms of the glorious days of 1918.

"No arguments can hide these very simple facts which are well known to every Frenchman. There can be no salvation for France other than stubborn resistance to Germany until liberation by the Allies victory.

"As far as I am concerned I have striven since November, 1940, by means which have not been entirely fruitless, to encourage French resistance in North Africa, where I had the honor of serving for six years, and to which I remain deeply attached.

"Today my firm resolution is to continue to serve France together with those who suffer and fight for her liberation.

"The Frenchmen who carry on the fight, the Free French, can have only one chief, General de Gaulle, under the orders of whom I intend to serve from now on. I am from Lorraine, and my place is under the flag with the Cross of Lorraine."

In French circles here it was said yesterday that some of the men who resigned yesterday had considered such a step before. One such occasion was the time when German pressure forced Marshal Petain to fire Maxim Weygand as commander of the French troops in North Africa. They put it off then, but Laval's accession to power—and his outright espousal of the Nazi cause—was too much.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said at his press conference that he had heard of the resignations at the embassy but was not in a position to comment specifically at this time.

Follows Leahy's Recall

Mr. Hull emphasized, however, that, considering the situation in France as a whole, he had confidence in the French people's love of liberty. He authorized the following statement:

"I might reiterate that I have the fullest confidence in the patriotism and the wisdom and the love of liberty of the French people.

"It is in the light of these characteristics which they unquestionably possess that it is tragic to see an attempt to seize the leadership of the French people by elements at Vichy which are avowedly in favor of a surrender to the Axis nations contrary to any real French sentiment to that effect."

The evacuation of the French Embassy by fully a quarter of Henry-Haye's staff followed by a few days the action of the United States Government in recalling Ambassador William D. Leahy from Vichy for "consultation."

Relations between Washington and Vichy are now on a day-to-day basis, and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles has stated that decisions by the United States Government may not await the return of Ambassador Leahy.

President Roosevelt's action in recalling Ambassador Leahy was designed to cut the ground from under Laval. The people of France, it is known, would view with horror a formal diplomatic break with the United States, France's traditional friend and now her great hope.

6 miles, wading through minefields and destroying many enemy blockhouses.

Finnish counterattacks by forces as large as two regiments, bolstered by tanks, were declared met by a storm of artillery and trench mortar fire and then turned into retreat by an enveloping movement by Russian infantry.

Nazi Attacks Pinched Off

In the Arctic regions to the north (presumably west of Murmansk), four German attacks were declared pinched off by the Russians.

Reviewing naval operations in Norwegian and Barents waters, the Moscow news said the Russian navy had sunk during the winter 58 German ships of a tonnage of 378,400. During the first ten days of April, seven additional German transports of 48,000 tons were sunk, it was announced.

A dispatch from the north said the German air force had lost 33 per cent of the planes with which it tried to raid the Murmansk supply base recently. In one attack, 27 Nazi planes were shot down.

On the Kalinin front, which stretches from Moscow northwest to Lake Ilmen, the Russians reported that among 5000 enemy troops killed were members of Belgian and Netherlands "volunteer" legions. The capture of a fairly large German stronghold on this front also was announced.

of pounding bombs and shells. They are carrying on in the best American tradition. They find time for a great deal of joking, entertainment and amusement, despite the fact that there are no movies, dances, baseball games, drug stores, clubs, parks or parties on Corregidor.

Simple, But Nourishing Food

The limited stocks of food are being conserved and rationed. Nevertheless each soldier gets enough to eat, good, simple food, but nourishing. Men find plenty to do when not manning guns or on watch. Some of them are affecting beards, for the razor blades are running short. Old issues of magazines and newspapers are read and reread until they are literally all worn out. Books at the post library are in great demand and even the duller technical volumes are showing signs of wear.

Playing cards seem to be endowed with some sort of immortality and despite almost constant use are in fairly good condition, with every game from solitaire to blackjack being played. Home-made checker boards are in use throughout the island. Obviously weekend trips to Manila, Tagaytay and Baguio are out, but the men on the fortified islands enjoy cool breezes rarely found in the tropics. They have daily views of sunrise and sunset unsurpassed in the world.

Death Hovers Over All

Being face to face with eternity every hour of the day has inevitably turned the thoughts of the soldiers to religion. Church services are held regularly and almost all who are not on duty attend. Those on duty are visited by the chaplains who brave the Japanese shells in making the rounds of the batteries and the gun pits. Daily news bulletins posted at the headquarters of each organization keep the men abreast of world news. Short-wave broadcasts from the United States and other countries are heard.

"Bull session," where men exchange tall stories, are frequent. Now and then a group gets together for a bit of harmonizing.

It takes little to satisfy their wants and they are happy to be doing their part for their country on a distant Pacific outpost. They are confident of the triumph of the cause for which they are fighting and they are proud of their own achievements as first-class fighting men.

British Fleet Seen in West Mediterranean

By the Associated Press

Vichy, April 22.—A powerful British naval squadron including two battleships, was reported tonight to be prowling the western Mediterranean on an "unknown mission."

Official spokesman said the squadron was reported somewhere between Bizerte, 450 miles across the Mediterranean on the coast of Tunisia, and Toulon, naval base in southern France, where some of France's modern warships are tied up.

They reported from Tangiers that the squadron was composed of two battleships with an escort of six destroyers. They said the ships passed through the Strait of Gibraltar at 2 p. m. yesterday, sailing into the Mediterranean from the Atlantic.

The Tangiers report said that one of the battleships was identified as a new, 35,000-ton ship of the line and added that "this was the first movement of such an important squadron in weeks."

Britain has four new 35,000-ton battleships, although it is not known whether all of them are in commission. A fifth, the Prince of Wales, was sunk by the Japanese off Malaya early in the Pacific war.

Those known to be in commission are the King George V and the Duke of York. The others are the Jellicoe and the Beatty.

Heavy Units Reported at Toulon

Private advices from Europe last week said that important units of the French fleet were concentrated at Toulon undergoing repairs.

They were said to include the 26,500-ton battleships Dunkerque and Strasbourg, both heavily damaged in the British bombardment of Mers-el-Kebir in July 1940, and two older and smaller battleships, the Courbet and Orleans.

The aircraft carrier Commandant Teste and three heavy cruisers, the Foch, Colbert and Dupleix, each 10,000 tons, also were reported at Toulon together with smaller cruisers, destroyers and fleet auxiliaries.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Japs Outflank Burma Army, Chinese Say

By the United Press

Chungking, April 22.—Japanese troops were reported tonight to have occupied the Burmese town of Pyinmana, 135 miles south of Mandalay, and to have outflanked the Chinese defenders of the town of Loikaw, 70 miles to the east near the Thailand border.

A communique said that severe fighting was in progress in the southern suburbs of Pyinmana, but it was reported that the main Chinese forces had withdrawn to prepared positions north of the town.

The communique, however, apparently covered action earlier this week and later reports said that the Japanese had reached the northern suburbs of Pyinmana, athwart the highway and railroad to Mandalay.

Retreat on Salween Front

On the Eastern, or Salween River front, the communique said that the Japanese, aided by tanks and planes, reached the vicinity of Loikaw on Sunday and immediately began to attack the town on Monday.

"Chinese troops, defending Loikaw in the midst of extreme difficulties, are holding their positions," the communique said. "Bayonet fighting is a daily experience there. Both our, and the enemy's casualties, are heavy."

The communique said that another Japanese detachment "tried to outflank us by attacking a point seven miles north of Loikaw. However, we halted them."

Reports from the front said, however, the Japanese still were seven miles north of the town, and thus had outflanked its defenders.

On the Irrawaddy River front, around the oil fields of Yenangyaung to the west, the communique said that Chinese troops, after having occupied that town, "continue their sweeping operations against the Japanese" south of it.

London Admits Loss

(Dispatches received in London on Wednesday said that Japanese troops had driven back into Yenangyaung and that Chinese reinforcements, sent there to help British imperials to escape from a trap last week, were fighting a delaying action while the British withdrew to the north. It was believed that the Chungking communique referred to fighting previous to the reported Japanese re-entry into the town.)

The communique said American Volunteer Group fliers were backing up the Chinese on the Pyinmana front. It said that on Monday morning, the "Flying Tigers" inflicted heavy damage on the Japanese west of the town, shooting down a Nipponese observation plane.

Witherow Hit By WLB Over Union Dispute

President Roosevelt's War Labor Board last night charged William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, with making a statement directly "counter" to a pledge he signed for peaceful settlement of all labor disputes.

In a statement signed by every member of the board, WLB challenged a remark attributed to Witherow in a New York speech Tuesday night to the effect that the question of union security was not included in the labor-industry agreement reached at the White House after Pearl Harbor.

"In a joint statement issued yesterday," the WLB asserted, "William Green, president, American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president, Congress of Industrial Organizations, took the position that the industry-labor agreement which provides for no strikes and no lockouts contained the provision that all labor disputes, including those involving issues of union security, were to be finally determined by the War Labor Board, and that the industry representatives in the industry-labor conference accepted that arrangement.

Both Labor, Industry Agreed

"That position is correct. At the conclusion of that conference, both industry and labor committed themselves to a peaceful settlement of all disputes by a war labor board to be established by the President.

"In a speech in New York last night, William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, is reported to have said that the question of union security was not included in that committment.

"Any such statement runs counter to the pledge signed by Mr. Witherow and the 11 other members of the conference."

The WLB cited the opening sentence of the pledge, which read:

"The employer member of the conference accept the President's direction for peaceful settlement of disputes and the establishment of a war labor board."

"All Labor Disputes."

WLB pointed out that industry members of the conference said they believed "in determining procedure of the board, consideration should be given" to industry's suggestion that union security disputes were not a proper subject for final determination by the board, but cited that President Roosevelt's executive order of January 12, establishing WLB, provided:

"That for the duration of the war there shall be no strikes or lockouts, and that all labor disputes shall be settled by peaceful means."

The order further gave the board jurisdiction, WLB's statement declared, to finally determine disputes, "and for this purpose may use mediation, voluntary arbitration, or arbitration under rules established by the board."

Its jurisdiction over disputes involving union security was settled when raised by the Inland Steel Co. last month, WLB stated, when the board adopted unanimously a resolution declaring it has "jurisdiction to consider all labor disputes," including "labor disputes as to union status."

Signed by 12 Members

The board's statement was signed by all 12 members—four representing the public, four for industry, and four for labor. They are: For the public, William H. Davis, chairman; George W. Taylor, Frank P. Graham and Wayne L. Morse; for employers, Roger D. Lapham, Walter Teagle, E. J. McMillan and H. B. Horton, and for labor, Thomas Kennedy, R. J. Thomas, Emil Rieve and Martin P. Durkin.

Possible Tin Field Seen in Rockbridge

By the Associated Press

The Geological Survey reported yesterday that "further prospecting may be warranted" in the tin deposits of Irish Creek, in northern Rockbridge County, Va.

The suggestion was advanced in a report on studies made by survey experts as a part of its investigation of domestic resources of strategic and critical miners.

Cassiterite was discovered in the area in 1846, the report said, and the tin ore has been mined periodically since, but production has been small, amounting probably to less than 1000 tons of ore, principally from workings on Panther Run, a tributary of Irish Creek.

2½-5 Gal. Gas Ration to Be in Effect May 15

obtain additional allowances on proof of need.

The ration allowance of 2½ to 5 gallons a week for ordinary motorists would be far below the average consumption of gas by passenger cars in the past. The American Automobile Association reported that this average was 55 gallons a month, or more than 12 gallons a week, during 1941.

In 1940, passenger cars consumed an average of 653 gallons a year, trucks 1107 gallons and buses 5036 gallons. The average for all vehicles in that year was 742 gallons.

Because of transportation shortages as a result of tanker sinkings, curtailment of gasoline supplies in the East now is "so severe that supplying passenger cars on a first-come, first-served basis is obviously inadequate," Henderson asserted.

Owners of inboard motorboats not used commercially also will be required to obtain ration cards while a normal supply of gasoline will be allowed for other nonhighway purposes, including outboard motorboats, farm tractors, gasoline engines, stoves and furnaces and cleaning establishments. In such cases, however, owners will be required to sign a declaration that the gasoline will not be used on highways.

Automobile owners driving from States outside of the rationing area into the rationing area may obtain ration cards upon presentation of their registration certificates at the local rationing board nearest the border.

States in which gasoline will be rationed are Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

On Capitol Hill, Senator Downey (Democrat) of California said Americans might as well plan on doing a lot more walking, and predicted better health and fewer traffic snarls as a result.

Canadians Get More Gas, Auto Group Protests

Boston, April 22 (U.P.).—The Automobile Legal Association tonight protested OPA's projected gasoline rationing program for the Atlantic Seaboard as "wholly out of proportion with the hardships imposed on other sections of the country."

In a telegram to Price Administrator Leon Henderson, William A. Thibodeau, A. L. A. general manager, criticized any such limitation as 5 gallons per week for East Coast motorists when Canadian motorists will be able to obtain 49 to 88 per cent more United States gasoline during a three-month rationing period.

Reporting that 90 per cent of Canada's gasoline comes from the United States, the telegram stated that in the period from April to June inclusive Canadian motorists are limited to "97 United States gallons" while during a three-month period Atlantic Seaboard automobile owners would receive only 60 gallons.

Jean Appel's Organ Recital Shows Methods of Composers

By Ray C. B. Brown

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Jean Slater Appel in recital Wednesday night in Washington Chapel of Latter-Day Saints Church. Program of compositions by Johann Sebastian Bach, Wilhelm Kienzl, Max Reger, Sigfrid Karg, Marcel Dupre and Norman Coke Jephcott.

Continuing the third annual spring festival of organ music, the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists presented Jean Slater Appel, organist of Western Presbyterian Church, in a recital last evening before an audience that filled the Washington Chapel of Latter-Day Saints. Of the 12 compositions on the program, nine were chorale-preludes, and this predominance offered an interesting survey of the methods by which three composers handled the problem of transcribing and harmonizing familiar chants.

Brown

Wilhelm Kienzl, best known as a writer of operas and orchestral music, was represented by three preludes, each treated in a different style. "From the Depths of My Heart" was set with a dulcet lyricism, tender and appealing; "Hark, a Voice Saith All Is Mortal" had an ominous and slow pedal rhythm, relentless as fate, beneath the simple harmonization of the hymn, and "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" rang out with a challenging and confident spirit.

Sigfrid Karg, inventor of many of the registrations that enhanced the tone color of modern organ playing, laid aside that bright palette when he composed chorale-preludes. In "Dearest Jesus, We Are Here" the spirituality of the song is not disturbed by ornamentation, and the only technical trick is the use of a single woodwind pipe as a leading voice. The echo device is employed effectively and without ostentation in "I Thank Thee Lord," and "By the Waters of Babylon" has a sincere poignancy.

Marcel Dupre, a master of orchestral effects in his larger compositions, is sparing of them in his preludes, which are short and very persuasive. "In Thee Is Gladness" has a bright tintinnabulation in its expression of happiness. "In Quiet Joy" is calmly meditative and serene, and "How Brightly Shines the Morning Star" has a remarkable accompaniment suggesting the trumpets of the dawn.

The recitalist began her program with a rather unimpressive performance of Bach's "Cathedral" prelude and fugue, stunting its dimensions by her caution in the use of stops. After that her registrations were more confident, and her playing gained in color. Her reading of the improvisation movement from Max Reger's second sonata was so well done as to make its uninspired pages sound less pedantic than they are. She closed with a toccata on "America" by the English-American composer, Norman Coke Jephcott, marked by brilliant passage-work and some highly ingenious harmonizations of the tune.

Deluge of Dollar Donations Asked in Symphony Drive

Asking that everyone interested in the welfare of the National Symphony send in his contribution without waiting to be solicited, E. R. Finkenstaedt, chairman of the orchestra's sustaining fund campaign, stated yesterday that there is immediate need for small contributions from thousands of individuals if the drive is to be successful.

The drive for $114,000 to maintain the National Symphony through 1942-43 closes this Saturday.

"Yesterday," Finkenstaedt said, "we reported that $52,696.85, or 46.3 per cent of the goal, had been raised. That is a very creditable showing at the half-way point of the drive, but this amount was contributed by only 909 individuals.

"We must have many small contributions at once if the National Symphony's drive is to be successful. We have almost exhausted the roster of large givers and the balance of the goal must be made up of gifts from those interested in the Symphony and who can contribute small sums of from $1 to $3.

"Several hundred volunteer workers have been canvassing Washington for the past six days," he reported, "but in the three days remaining they cannot reach all of those who wish to contribute."

Contributions may be mailed to the National Symphony's campaign headquarters, 1111 Woodward Building or left at the Symphony stand in the lobby of the Woodward Building; or, if anyone who wishes to contribute will telephone the orchestra, a worker will be sent to him, Finkenstaedt said.

Alexandria Nurses Aide Interviews Set

Applicants for enrollment in a 90-hour nurses' aide course to be started by the Alexandria Red Cross Chapter next Tuesday will be interviewed from 9 to 1 today at the chapter headquarters, 1012 Prince Street, Alexandria, by Mrs. Howard Richards, nurses' aide chairman for the chapter.

The interviews are being conducted to determine the eligibility of applicants, Mrs. Richard said, since more than 60 women have applied for enrollment, and the course will be limited to 30 members. Those accepted on the basis of interviews also must undergo physical examinations.

Mrs. David Drain, a registered nurse, will direct the nurses' aide course, the third in a series of classes designed to train 100 women for emergency nursing service.

House Group Starts Work On Tax Bill

earnings bases, were discussed at the committee's first closed session on the big war revenue measure.

Reports that the President in his anti-inflation message will recommend a 99 per cent excess profits tax on all corporation profits in excess of 6 per cent, with the 6 per cent subject to normal taxes and surtaxes, caused a flurry at the morning session.

Randolph Paul, tax adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, was hastily summoned for an explanation. Plainly embarrassed by the call, Paul said he had absolutely no knowledge of the plan and did not know what the President would recommend.

The committee privately debated whether to proceed until the President has laid down his message, but Chairman Doughton gave a "go ahead" signal. The committee will not reach even tentative votes this week. It was pointed out that any new Administration tax proposals would come in the normal course to the committee.

Old Wounds Reopened

Members declined to comment publicly on reports that the new Administration plan would eliminate the alternative of using the average earning basis of determining excess profits, but privately it opened old wounds. The House and the committee have twice defeated an exclusive excess profits base of determining excess profits. This year the Treasury dropped the old feud. One member said that if the plan is as reported "it will catch the fire of 21 antiaircraft guns." There are just 21 committeemen.

One Capitol tax spokesman remarked that 99 per cent of all profits above 6 per cent of invested capital, would leave corporations with barely a 3 per cent return, before State and local taxes. These, he suggested, would wipe out all profit margin.

Although corporate taxes was the first big question before the committee, members were plainly getting ready for an ultimate showdown on some form of sales tax to avoid steeply increased surtaxes on individuals.

Suggestions Requested

The Treasury yesterday was asked to suggest new personal income taxes that would raise only from one to two billion dollars in lieu of an additional three billion dollars sought from individuals by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The Treasury also was asked to present alternative tax schedules for raising one to two billion dollars in corporate taxes, as well as the three billion in corporate taxes already recommended.

Influential members of the committee have intimated that the complete bill will wind up with only five to six billion dollars in revenue unless a sales tax is invoked for the balance. It was suggested in one quarter yesterday that the Administration might withdraw its opposition to a sales tax once a general price ceiling is invoked. The Treasury has argued that sales levies would have an inflationary effect, but once a ceiling is fixed it was contended this argument would not hold.

Army Sick Rate Shows 50 Per Cent Decrease

The general health of the Army during the past winter was approximately 50 per cent better than for the same period year before, the surgeon general informed the War Department recently.

Normal higher admission rates during the winter months are expected due of common respiratory infections with their serious complications, the surgeon general pointed out. The past winter has been an exception and sick rates were unusually low.

Washington consumers during this critical period."

Under the Federal milk marketing order, prices which distributors must pay dairymen are regulated, but not retail charges.

At the present time the approximately 1500 producers supplying this milkshed are receiving $3.57 a 100 pounds for milk sold in fluid form (Class I) and $2.10 for that disposed of in the form of cream (Class II). Under the Federal order, however, the prices will revert to $3.17 and $1.90, respectively, on May 1.

In addition, the farmers receive premium payments based on cattle and barn scores.

The amendment proposed earlier this month by Roy F. Hendrickson, Agricultural Marketing Administrator, and ratified yesterday by Wickard would combine the two classes of milk and make $3.57 the basic price.

Bootlegging Hinted

In exceptions filed last week by four dairies and two producer cooperatives, it was argued that "bootlegging" of cream would be encouraged if the amendment were adopted. Producers also denied that the plan would bolster their revenue, as the Agriculture Department says.

Dairymen have until April 27 to ratify the order. A two-thirds majority is required to make it effective. Also, it must be indorsed by 50 per cent of the handlers, by volume. If the farmers approve and the handlers do not, the revised order must be signed by President Roosevelt to become operative.

If the dairy farmers reject the plan, the Secretary of Agriculture will have no alternative but to proclaim suspension of the marketing order. In that event, there would be no regulation of prices to be paid producers for their milk.

Church Regains Silver Chalice

Leonardtown, Md., April 22.—After a lapse of 61 years a silver chalice, part of a Communion service belonging to St. Paul P. E. Church in Frederick, has been restored to the church.

In March, 1881, when fire destroyed the town, the church Communion service, in custody of the Rev. Harry Chesley, then rector of St. Paul's, was found in a melted lump.

John Parran gave this molten mass to his sister, Mrs. George M. Pearce of Baltimore, who recently had it made into a chalice and returned to the church as a gift from her.

plaints and five sentences and runs from 1925 to late in 1940 when, on three charges of false pretenses, he was sentenced to 720 days in the District Jail.

Laid Groundwork in Jail

It was in the jail, testimony before the committee disclosed, that Fuller first laid the groundwork for his promotional scheme, then induced Everett R. Hurt of Gaithersburg, Md., a distributor of encyclopedias, to aid his release by advancing, without security, $1600 "for what I was told were bum checks," Hurt said.

Part of the fantastic story was told by former Governor Curley, who said that in the summer of 1941 he was talked into permitting his name to be used as president of Fuller's enterprise in a 2½-hour conversation with the former convict in the Mayflower Hotel.

None of Fuller's distinguished associates—and the list included better than a dozen business executives and Government officials—knew of his criminal past, the testimony showed, until negotiations in connection with Government housing contracts and a project for development of aluminum clay deposits in Utah, had proceeded for months.

Another phase of the story of Fuller was unraveled by Robert G. Thach, 2101 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, one of the organizers and former vice president and general counsel of Pan American Airways and one-time partner in the old law firm of the late Senator Underwood of Alabama.

Rayford W. Alley, New York lawyer, outlined for the committee his experience with Fuller and his promotion, "Engineers Group, Inc." He said he believed, for a time, that the organization was "responsible" largely because Thach, an old friend and an attorney of the highest standing, was engaged as counsel for the group in negotiations for development of "kalunite," aluminum deposits in Utah.

Many Prominent Names

Curley gave the committee a list of persons he was led to believe were officers or members of an "advisory board" of Engineers Group, which he and other witnesses said they believed to be a legitimate enterprise. Curley's list included:

Donald Wakefield Smith, former member of the National Labor Relations Board; C. D. Cook, vice president of Reynolds Metal Corp.; Clarence A. Brown, president of the Eisemann Magneto Corp.; George E. Eichelberger, chairman of the executive committee of Translux; Frank Eichelberger, president of Kalunite, Inc.; T. W. Simmons, president of Bolsa Chica Petroleum Corp. of California, and Henry Holt, vice president of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Co. of Detroit.

The "kalunite" deal, said Alley, failed to materialize in September, 1941, after six months of negotiation. Meanwhile, he added, he had met Fuller and had been told by him that he had some "good contracts to give out." Fuller, he stated, spoke of private housing projects to be underwritten by the Federal Housing Administration.

Subsequently, Alley said, one of his clients, a contracting firm and several other builders advanced $21,000 to Engineers Group on Fuller's representation that it would cost $12 a house to get loans through FHA. The contractors "got nothing" for their money, Alley testified.

While he was attempting to determine the worth of the company, Alley stated, Fuller showed him a Dun and Bradstreet rating for the company which, the witness said, he later was convinced was "phoney." By January, 1942, Alley testified, his clients were threatening "nasty action," the bank had refused payment on a draft on the company and a $3200 check had been protested. Alley then examined the company's books, found them "in a terrible condition," discovered there had been no performance on any contracts while $60,000 had been collected, and learned, for the first time, that Fuller had a criminal record.

In their Mayflower Hotel conversation, Curley said, Fuller represented Engineers Group as a project to "save America" by developing a new source of aluminum. Curley stated he resigned as president in December, 1941, after learning that the company was "offering engineering services to persons who were seeking Federal contracts."

Fuller, pictured by one witness as the kind of a conversationalist who can talk brilliantly about "anything from chemistry to tennis," was applauded by Curley as a man of irresistible appeal.

Curley blamed some of his trouble on the "errand boy" nature of his office as Democratic national committeeman from Massachusetts. He said he was going to resign as soon as he could.

Negros, Rich Sugar Island, Faces Invasion by Japan

Enemy Rushes Forward on 2 Panay Fronts

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japan turned its attention to another rich Philippine island yesterday as its invasion hordes pressed forward in their conquest of Panay.

The War Department reported that enemy planes were making a reconnaissance of Negros, sugar-producing island between Cebu and Panay in the central Philippines.

This indicated to observers here that Negros might be next on the Japs' invasion time-table. With Corregidor and its satellite forts holding firm, thus denying the enemy the use of strategic Manila Bay, the Mikado's forces are apparently extending their attacks to the less strongly held portions of the Philippines.

This has a double purpose—exploitation of the riches of the Philippines and denial to the United States of secret air bases on unoccupied islands from which military installations in Japanese-held areas may be bombed.

Panay Fighting Continues

Meanwhile, fighting continued in two sections of Panay. Strong enemy units repeatedly assaulted American-Filipino positions in the central part of the island and our troops were forced to withdraw from Lambuao, a town about 25 miles north of Iloilo, principal central Philippine port on the southern coast of the island.

Japanese forces which landed two days ago at San Jose de Buenavista on the western coast of Panay are attacking the American-Filipino lines near San Remigio and Valderraman, the Army communique said.

Corregidor was free of enemy fire Tuesday, the report stated, while the only attacks on the other forts were a few dive-bombing raids on Forts Hughes and Drum.

Since the American air raids on Davao and Luzon by planes from Australia the Japs have extended their control over more of the Philippines. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia announced that the planes landed at a secret base in the islands and the enemy has been frantically trying to find it.

The aerial reconnaissance of Negros may have been merely a search for such a hidden American base or a preliminary to an invasion of the island, military men here believe. They lean to the latter assumption, as well—camouflaged air bases are almost impossible to locate from a plane.

Negros is an important agricultural island, producing three-quarters of the Philippines' sugar. It has an area of 4983 square miles, larger than the neighboring islands of Cebu and Panay, but is less populated than they are and has no cities or ports comparable to Cebu City and Iloilo.

Biddle Opens Probe of 'Isms' Movements Within Government

Attorney General Biddle yesterday launched an investigation of suspected subversive influences inside the machinery of the Federal Government.

To guide departmental hearings on charges against organizations and Federal employes, the Attorney General set up an interdepartmental committee, with John J. Dempsey, Undersecretary of the Interior, as chairman.

Awaiting action is a file of 4112 cases, which includes 1122 cases based on inquiries conducted by the Dies Committee. The file was submitted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Other members of the review committee are:

Francis G. Brown, solicitor of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Herbert E. Gaston, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Wayne C. Taylor, Undersecretary of Commerce.

Edwin D. Dickinson, dean of the law school, University of California, who is now on special leave serving as a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Dickinson will be executive secretary of the interdepartmental committee and will serve also as a member of the hearing committee for the Departmen of Justice. Other members of the Justice group are Charles Fahy and Ugo Carusi.

The interdepartmental committee will lack authority to order dismissals, but will make recommendations which are expected to be followed by the heads of agencies.

The chairman, Dempsey, was a member of the Dies Committee while he was a member of the House, and more than once protested against what he called unreasonable and extreme tactics used by the committee.

The Department of Justice announcement said it would be the task of Dempsey's group to help Federal departments and agencies "in maintaining uniformity of procedure and a fair and efficient discharge of the Congressional mandate" for the investigation of suspected subversive employes.

Social Justice Records Slated For Probe

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The Washington special grand jurors on Axis agents—veterans of an eight-month probe of sedition and subversive operations—are scheduled to start digging today into the records of the Coughlin magazine, Social Justice.

The weekly publication was barred from the mails last week, after Attorney General Biddle labeled it "clearly seditious" and launched the grand jury inquiry into its financing and publication. Biddle said Social Justice followed closely the propaganda line of the radio stations of enemy powers.

Scheduled to appear today is E. Perrin Schwartz, nominal editor of Social Justice, who was ordered to produce all his records of financial transactions, circulation and correspondence.

Hickey Loaned by Navy

Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, a member of the propaganda squad which broke up two German propaganda machines, was loaned to the Department of Justice by the Navy, to take part in the Coughlin inquiry.

Lieut. Hickey said last night that the subpena issued for Schwartz was broad in its terms and required the production of original records in every case where this was physically possible, and of copies in all other cases.

Hickey is associated with Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan, who have been tracing the threads of a network of defeatist publications before the grand jurors for two weeks.

Prosecutor Maloney said last night that David Baxter, leader in the secret, revolutionist Social Republic Society, was by no means through with the investigators. The hidden leadership of Baxter's band have warned their followers to arm themselves for an "emergency."

As he was about to leave Washington Tuesday, to speak in Chicago and Lima, Ohio, before returning to his headquarters in California, Baxter was served with a new subpena calling him back before the grand jurors today.

The prospect that a Chicago court would scrutinize the correspondence of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, Chicago isolationist and Red-baiter, with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, the German agent, George Sylester Viereck, and others faded yesterday.

The scrutiny was demanded in the name of Mrs. Dilling's husband, Albert W. Dilling, an engineer, with whom she is embroiled in a divorce action. However, Dilling told the court he did not authorize the step and that he had dismissed Maurice T. Weinshenk, as his attorney.

Meanwhile, Tsutomu Obana—an admitted Japanese agent—pleaded nolo contendere (no defense) before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court yesterday to a charge of criminal conspiracy.

Dunton Elected Head of Rotary In 187th District

Richmond, Va., April 22 (AP).—Rotarians of the 187th District, Rotary International, concluded their annual conference here today after electing Ammon G. Dunton of the Kilmarnock-Irvington-White Stone Club district governor to succeed Branch Spaulding of Charlottesville.

Speaking at the luncheon, Senator Raymond E. He urged that we carefully guard that criticism and that privilege and "hold on to that fragment of freedom for tomorrow's world."

Prof. Oron J. Man Accused Of Aiding Nazi Turns Tearful

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 22.—Chubby Max Stephan, who allegedly succored an enemy of America in the war, worried in a county jail cell today over the calamity suddenly brought upon him.

Once a hearty, smiling fellow who cracked jokes with patrons of his riverfront saloon, the 49-year-old German native was depressed and plainly fearful.

The State had taken away his liquor license. His cafe was threatened with being closed. The Government was considering whether to try him for treason, for which death is the extreme penalty.

So Max, his cigar of apparent small comfort, wept in front of interviewers. He stumbled over his words.

"If I get in prison," he said, "I hope when the war is settled, they will let me out quick."

The FBI, has accused Stephan naturalized citizen, of having helped Lieut. Peter Krug, 21-year-old German army combat flier, in his flight from a Canadian concentration camp. United States District Attorney John C. Lehr said he would recommend a charge of treason.

Meanwhile the FBI here announced that a man held in San Antonio, Tex., on suspicion of being Krug was not the fugitive flier. City police had arrested the man in San Antonio railroad yards yesterday.

John S. Bugas, FBI chief here, said after communications with San Antonio authorities that it had been established that the suspect was not Krug. The man held, he said, was identified as an itinerant. The search for Krug continued.

In his cell here Stephan talked at length. He related that he had fought in the German army in the first World War, that he had bought $100 in defense bonds last December 27. Often he wiped away tears.

John S. Bugas, head of the FBI office here, said Stephen admitted giving money and food to Krug and arranging transportation for the flier out of Detroit.

"They tell me I will lose my citizenship over this," Stephan said. "I will feel bad about that. If anybody attacked this country, I would defend it."

The State Liquor Commission confiscated Stephan's tavern license on a complaint of the city issued in connection with the Federal charges against Stephan. A revocation order for his restaurant license also was prepared.

Sleepy Elephant Topples Over, Injures Spine

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Mary Ann, lone elephant in Baltimore's Druid Hill Park zoo, died tonight 12 hours after she was found lying on her side in misery on the floor of her cage.

Officials, who earlier had expressed the belief that her illness, following two animal deaths at the zoo, had been caused by malicious intent, said an autopsy would be held.

However, Dr. Lawrence Hickman, veterinarian called in to attend the aging 3-ton pachyderm, said Mary Ann simply had fallen over while sleeping and injured her spine.

"Elephants always sleep that way," he said, adding that something might have upset her or that she had just lost her balance.

Airplane Flights To Test Efficiency Of Va. Air Warning

Richmond, Va., April 22 (AP).—In Richmond on an inspection trip, Donald Percy, regional civil director for the Philadelphia region of the aircraft warning service, said today that test flights would be run through the State within the next few days and again two weeks later to determine the efficiency of Virginia's aircraft warning system.

Similar tests run recently in Delaware, he said, indicated an increase in airplane spotting efficiency from 24 per cent to more than 80 per cent.

Percy conferred with Maj. W. Glenn Elliott and State Senator G. E. Heller, who are in charge of the Virginia system.

U. S. Agencies Urged to Use Newspaper Ads

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—Suggesting that the United States Government should use professional methods to increase the sale of war bonds, President Walter M. Dear of the American Newspaper Publishers Association recommended today that advertising of bonds be done on the same basis as the Government is acquiring other war material.

"Advertising is professional in its skill and execution," he said, "and the equipment for newspaper advertising represents, in addition, very substantial industrial and business investment, including extensive employment of skilled labor and large consumption of commodity goods."

Speaks Before Editors

Speaking in a closed session of several hundred editors and publishers meeting at the first general session of the fifty-sixth annual convention of the A. N. P. A. at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Dear said that Government advertising should be paid for "on a moral and rational par with that upon which other Government services and goods are paid for . . .

"It is prudent to realize that for some time it has been obvious that certain Government departments and members of Congress are inclined to discourage by one means or another, the use of advertising, and thus through ill will or utter heedlessness to injure the main source of newspaper income."

Pointing to the suggestion of officers of the Treasury Department that advertising expense be not allowed as deductible, Dear said that if this principle is applied to war contracts "it will go hard with every commercial line."

Dear, who is general manager of the Jersey City (N. J.) Journal, also asked the editors to make strong efforts "in the beginning" to reduce sharply the flood of new laws coming from various agencies of the Government, especially those laws which may result in being "grievously and unjustly oppressive to our industry . . . when later developments are reached, it is often too late for successful controversy."

Tripp Urges Caution

Also speaking on the subject of Government advertising, Frank E. Tripp, chairman of the A. N. P. A. bureau of advertising, said:

"The bureau of advertising is unalterably opposed to any Government policy which may be construed, or has resemblance to a wartime subsidy of the American press, since such a policy might gravely endanger the news and editorial integrity of the newspapers. The patriotic services of the American press never have been, and must never be, evaluated in terms of dollars. We oppose any solicitation or action which may be construed as an effort to bring pressure upon the Government to buy advertising space in the newspapers of the Nation—as distinguished from honorable and orderly presentation to Government of the advantages of advertising."

A recent survey of the immediate prospects of advertising in the future read by Paul B. West, president of the Association of National Advertisers, said that 37 per cent of the companies interviewed would spend their usual advertising budget this year, 19 per cent would spend more, 40 per cent would spend less, and 4 per cent were undecided.

Although beverage and grocery firms are planning to increase advertising, he said, "88 per cent of the automotive field are cutting their advertising expenditures, several of them by 50 per cent."

McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin Publisher, Is Reelected President of A.P.

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—Robert McLean, president of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, was reelected president of the Associated Press today and two new vice presidents were named.

The board of directors, selecting the new officers of the cooperative news-gathering association, elected Houston Harte, president and publisher of the San Angelo (Tex.) Standard, first vice president. He succeeds E. Lansing Ray of the St. Louis (Mo.) Globe-Democrat.

Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president and publisher of the New York Times, was elected second vice president. He succeeds Stuart H. Perry, editor and publisher of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram.

The directors reelected Kent Cooper, Associated Press general manager, secretary; Lloyd Stratton, assistant general manager, assistant secretary; L. F. Curtis, treasurer, and Alan J. Gould, executive assistant, as assistant treasurer.

Amendment Defeated

The executive committee, reelected, is composed of E. Lansing Ray, Stuart H. Perry, Paul Bellamy, Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer; Frank B. Noyes, Washington (D. C.) Star; McLean, Paul Patterson, Baltimore (Md.) Sun, and E. H. Butler, Buffalo (N. Y.) News.

Failing to get the necessary four-fifths of the vote cast, a proposed amendment to the by-laws was defeated which would have permitted members to publish the news report outside their defined hours of publication. The vote was 519 for, 254 against.

The proposed amendment also would have given afternoon member newspapers which now have no Sunday membership the opportunity to publish a Sunday edition carrying the Associated Press report.

Applications for membership, submitted by the Chicago Sun and the Washington (D. C.) Times-Herald were voted down. The vote against the application of the Sun, published by Marshall Field, for a morning paper membership, was 684 to 287, and that against the Times-Herald, published by Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, for the day and night report, was 514 to 242.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, a morning paper, withdrew his application for Associated Press evening paper membership prior to the voting.

Commenting on the vote declining membership to the Chicago Sun, Colonel McCormick said today:

"I hope the overwhelming vote of yesterday means that the gestapo is out of American newspaper offices forever.

"Some of the members were so apprehensive they asked the ballots be burned so they would not fall into the hands of the FBI.

"It is to the eternal honor of American publishers that they will not stand for that coercion. It is not at all a question between Mr. Field and myself, but one between a free press and Government coercion."

No Comment by Arnold

Speaking in behalf of her application, Mrs. Patterson said:

"Thurman Arnold (Assistant Attorney General) sent for me two years ago and said: 'If you want A. P. membership I can get it for you. I won't start it myself, but if you will send a member of your staff around the country and get some complaints from newspapers in your situation—that is, without A. P. memberships—I'll guarantee to break the monopoly and get you that membership.'"

"I come from four generations of newspaper people, and I didn't like it—I didn't like the smell of it. I went home and thought it over and I refused to act."

[Arnold, reached last night at his home in nearby Virginia, said he had no comment to make on Mrs. Patterson's statement.—Editor's note.]

Mrs. Patterson's application was opposed by S. H. Kauffmann, of the Washington Star, and Eugene Meyer, of the Washington Post. Kauffmann said Mrs. Patterson's claims of circulation dominance in Washington indicated that "she was not desperately in need of the A. P. service."

Tablet Sedatives Fatal To 5-Year-Old Va. Girl

Petersburg, Va., April 22 (AP).—Nellie Burr Mayes, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Raymond Mayes, of Dinwiddie, died at Petersburg Hospital last night of what Coroner D. C. Mayes said was accidental poisoning.

While playing in an outhouse at her home yesterday afternoon, the child found a box containing sedatives in tablet form. She went inside the house and fell asleep and could not be aroused.

Coroner Mayes said she must have eaten a number of the tablets, the overdose proving fatal.

Stiff Penalties Seen Under Sugar Ban

Rationing Starts May 5; Henderson Warns 'Chiselers'

Rationing of sugar will begin May 5 and Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday promised that the Government "will hit chislers hard and fast."

Violators of sugar regulations may be fined $10,000 or imprisoned for one year, or both.

"A few chiselers can do a great deal of harm both to the operation of rationing and to the morale of the country," Henderson said. "The country is in no mood to let chiselers get away with it. Our policy will be to hit them hard and fast."

He said he was confident, however, that an overwhelming majority of traders as well as institutional users will abide by the regulations.

The regulations will affect all users of sugar—even those who die.

Register in Schools

Under the program individuals will register in elementary schools throughout the country on May 4, 5, 6, 7, and industrial or institutional users will register at high schools on April 28 and 29. One adult representative of each family unit may register and obtain ration books for the entire family.

Family units will not include maids or other adults who are not blood relatives. They must register individually or with their own family units.

Soldiers or sailors leaving the United States for more than 30 days must surrender their ration books to local boards. Such books also must be turned over to boards within 10 days after the death of a person to whom a book was issued.

Children born after the registration dates may be registered at any time convenient to their parents or guardians.

The first stamp in the book will be valid for purchase of a pound of sugar from May 5-16 and not thereafter. Stamp No. 2 will cover the period from May 17-30, Stamp No. 3 from May 31 to June 13 and Stamp No. 4 from June 14-27.

Commercial Allowances

Supplies to restaurants will be reduced to half the amounts used in a base period which will be either the corresponding period of 1941 or the amount used during March, 1942, if records for last year are not available.

Producers of confections such as ice cream, preserves and bottled beverages, will be allotted 70 per cent of the amount previously used.

Minimum allowances also will be established for canned vegetables, canned fruit juices and fruits, frozen fruits and canned or cured meats, fish and poultry.

Knights of Columbus To Meet in Frederick

Frederick, Md., April 22.—The annual State convention of the Knights of Columbus will be held at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in this city on May 23 and 24, Joseph G. Loeffler, Baltimore, State deputy, announced today. The convention will be the first held here since 1914.

Sugar Boards Still Without Any Quarters

A tour of the District schools yesterday afternoon failed to reveal any quarters available for the six administrative offices for sugar rationing boards proposed on Tuesday, Superintendent of Schools Frank Ballou announced last night.

He said the survey would have to be continued through the week, without stating what were the "difficulties" which prevented the choices to be made yesterday as Commissioner Guy Mason had requested.

Commercial users of sugar, who are to register for their rationing cards on April 28-29 were advised that the rationing cards, which they have been asked to fill out in advance, are available at the District Rationing Board, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, or from their trade associations.

Washington retail grocers will receive instruction in sugar rationing from Ration Board officials at a meeting tonight at 8:15 in the Jewish Community Center.

Uniforms Rare at Library

Richmond, Va. (AP).—The Richmond public library's idea of keeping the reading room open on Sunday afternoons for soldiers and sailors didn't work out so well. During the first month of the new plan only four men in uniform visited the library on Sunday.

Group Drafts Safety Code For Industry

Formulation of a comprehensive safety code for the District was started yesterday at an organizational meeting in the Municipal Center Building of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board and a committee of 13 safety experts representing the public at large.

The committee of 13, an unpaid voluntary group, was called into session by the wage and safety board, also a voluntary body, which consists of Mrs. William Kittle, chairman; John E. Laskey, attorney, and Fred S. Walker, managing editor of the Trades Unionist.

In stressing the need and importance of a safety code for the district, Mrs. Kittle cited reports showing that in 1941, 32,930 injuries to wage earners in private industries were recorded in the District. Of this number, nearly 11,000 were disabling. In this same period, she said, there were 57 deaths.

The new committee will work under the general counsel of Director of Safety E. J. Bunker. Bunker told a Post reporter that codes covering various businesses and industries are expected to be ready in two or three months. About 15,000 District establishments will be covered, it was estimated.

The advisory committee consists of Swen Kjaer, retired safety expert foremrly of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, chairman; F. F. Aldridge, sanitary engineer, Southwest Health Center; Willy Arnheim, business representative, Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Laborers Union, Local 456, A. F. of L.

R. P. Blake, senior safety engineer, Department of Labor; Lloyd A. Blanchard, chief safety engineer, Office of Chief of Engineers, War Department; W. E. Brice, engineer, Travelers Insurance Co.; William F. Friel, employment director, S. Kann Sons Co.; E. P. Herges, safety engineer, United States Compensation Commission; C. B. Lauber, fire marshal; H. L. Leonard, safety engineer, Washington Gas Light Co.

Nelson Spurns Resignations Of Labor Aides

By the Associated Press

The bulk of the top personnel of the labor division of the War Production Board has offered a blanket resignation to War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, who refused it, WPB sources disclosed today.

The offer was made by a small group of spokesmen for key officials of the division, abolished last Saturday by President Roosevelt, in order to give Nelson a free hand in organizing a new "labor production division" with abbreviated powers.

Associates of Sidney Hillman, whose post as director of the Labor Division was abolished along with that unit, said he was planning to take a vacation of three weeks to a month, at least, due to ill health before assuming any official duties.

Hillman in Hospital

Hillman was in a Washington hospital, receiving treatment for arthritis, his associates said, but has informed his aides to continue functioning as usual pending creation of the new division.

No director has been appointed for the "labor production division," nor have its duties been clarified. It was ordered created by Mr. Roosevelt in his executive order establishing the new man power commission headed by Paul V. McNutt.

The old labor division's functions concerned with labor supply and training, were ordered transferred to McNutt's jurisdiction. However, the transfers has not taken place and morale in the orphaned WPB division was reported low, because of uncertainity as to the future.

Nelson was said to have assured the labor division executives who offered to step out of the picture, a group of spokesmen which included Erick Nicol and Maxwell Brandwen, executive assistants to the deposed Hillman, that he wished them to continue carrying on pending completion of the reorganization. However, Nelson's subordinates said the WPB chief himself was uncertain as to exactly what functions Mr. Roosevelt wished the new labor division to perform.

Hillman has been appointed "special assistant to the President on labor matters."

Status Like Hopkins

The White House said his status would be like that of Harry L. Hopkins in the lend-lease and munitions allocation field, but persons close to the labor chief said they feared the post might not be one of great responsibility. They predicted that if this proved true Hillman would leave the Government and resume his post as president of the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, from which he is on leave.

On the other hand, other well-placed sources said Hillman had talked with the President twice since the man power shuffle, and Mr. Roosevelt instructed him to build up his health in preparation for duties of high importance.

Army, Navy Join 5 Other U. S. Agencies To Combat Slowdowns in War Production

By the Associated Press

The Army and Navy were disclosed yesterday to be pooling efforts with five other Government agencies to combat industrial slowdowns in war production work.

Describing such slowdowns as "reprehensible," Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, made public a letter from Daniel S. Ring, director of maritime personnel, reporting that efforts were under way to develop a "centralized method of treatment of this problem." Ring did not outline the method.

Mr. Byrd told reporters he was convinced that in many instances deliberate attempts had been made to retard production, or else inefficiency of management or "Washington bureaucracy" had produced the same results. He said he would ask the Senate Naval Affairs Committee to make a thorough investigation if immediate remedial steps were not taken.

"We can't tolerate this kind of thing," he declared. "It makes no difference who is to blame, it's got to stop."

Mr. Byrd previously had created a stir by publicizing a report by Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher, director of Naval Shore Establishments, asserting that work slowdowns had cut down production in eight plants making vital war equipment for the Navy.

The Virginia Senator subsequently asked the Maritime Commission for a report on any similar situations it might have encountered. Ring, replying that the commission had no direct evidence of slowdowns, said tactics of this nature were "very difficult to detect with definite and tangible proof."

He added, however, that representatives of the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, War Production Board, War Labor Board, Labor Department Conciliation Service and the Bureau of Labor Standards were developing a uniform program which they hoped would solve the problem.

"Slowdowns fall into two classes," Ring wrote Mr. Byrd, "the first being the intentional slowdown, engineered by labor as a means of securing concessions or improved conditions.

"The second originates independently of labor disputes or bargaining and is not necessarily of an organized nature. This second type may be caused by lack of competent supervision, apathy of the individual worker or a general low morals in the plant."

Allegany County Board Criticized For Tax Rate Cut

Cumberland, Md., April 22 (AP).—The mayor and city council today criticized action of the Allegany County commissioners in reducing the 1942 tax rate, but making no provision to pay amounts owed the city.

Mayor Thomas F. Conlon declared "it is easy to cut the tax rate when obligations are not met," and suggested the coming fall elections "may have influenced the commissioners."

City officials pointed out the county owes Cumberland $8605.75 plus interest for street work done in front of school buildings from 1938 to 1941 inclusive, and has made no provisions for payment over the period of years.

"They are just building up a front, but you can't fool all the people, Mayor Conlon commented, adding, "the time to boast about a cut in the tax rate is when such things are possible after all obligations have been met."

Members of the council also expressed disapproval of the county commissioners' action in failing to provide for a raise in salaries of public school teachers.

Nebraska Police Hold Two Md. Suspects

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., April 22.—Robert Eversole and Glenn Giessner, Maryland youths, are being held in Lincoln, Nebr., where they have confessed to robbing Edward W. Castle, Williamsport, Md., near Halfway April 11, according to word received today by Sheriff Joseph D. Baker. Castle was held up and robbed of $73 by two hitch-hikers he picked up here. The Castle car was found abandoned several days later at Uniontown, Pa. Sheriff Baker said the FBI notified him of the arrest of the two.

C. I. O. Opposes Bill to Subject Unions to Antitrust Action

By the Associated Press

A C. I. O. spokesman yesterday opposed pending legislation to subject labor unions to prosecution under the antiracketeering and antitrust laws on the ground that it would outlaw strikes.

Nathan Cowan, of Washington, C. I. O. legislative representative, told a House Judiciary subcommittee that it might well "set aside these bills and others like them" and direct its attention "to winning the war." He criticized three bills introduced by Representatives Hobb (Democrat), of Alabama; Monroney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, which an A. F. of L. spokesman previously had condemned.

Contending that the legislation would outlaw strikes by making them punishable under a law prohibiting coercion, Cowan said the Nation would not tolerate "a destruction of the right" of labor to strike "by un-American legislation of this type."

Earlier Edward I. Kaplan, told the subcommittee that the A. F. of L. Teamsters Local he represents had never abused its powers over the perishable food supply of New York City.

Kaplan spoke as general counsel for Local No. 202 of the Teamsters Union, which he said had from 4500 to 5000 members in the metropolitan New York area.

He requested an opportunity to be heard to reply to charges made last week by farm spokesmen that the union had inflicted hardships on farmers through its organization activities.

Kaplan said the union has not attempted to interfere with farmers hauling their own produce.

Kaplan said New York City Markets Commissioner William Fellows Morgan called a conference of teamsters and farmers last year following complaints from farmers that porters refused to handle their produce.

As a result of the conference, he said, it was agreed that farmers and their helpers should not be required to join the union nor to employ the services of the union porters but would be required to carry some form of identification to establish their status as bona fide farmers and farmers' helpers.

Leaders Take Air To Push Bonds

Morgenthau, 'Butch' O'Hare to Appear On Program Tonight

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and other leaders of business, labor and Government will broadcast from WMAL over the Blue Network tonight from 10 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. (E. W. T.) in a special program devoted to a discussion of the national war bond quota system and the 10 per cent payroll savings plan.

Meantime the District War Savings Committee announced yesterday that the sale of war bonds here has been "wholly inadequate, and that sales "must be stepped up materially."

The committee warned that "our Government will secure the necessary funds, but it desires, first, to afford each of us the opportunity to subscribe voluntarily. If we do not respond sufficiently the necessary monies will be had through legislation."

Speakers on the broadcast tonight include Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations; W. P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and T. C. Cashen, chairman of the Railway Executives' Association.

Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. O'Hare, United States Navy ace who has been personally presented with the Congressional Medal by President Roosevelt, will be a special guest on the program.

Douglas Back On the Job With OCD

Melvyn Douglas, screen hero, was back on his job as arts consultant to the Office of Civilian Defense yesterday, with a folder of plans for helping communities find entertainment talent for their war rallies and demonstrations.

Most of all, he said, efforts will be made to sell them on the idea of using local talent. This is available in great quantities in the little theater and college dramatic groups of the country and can be utilized to great advantage in alleviating the demand on the time of top-flight stage and movie talent.

Entertainment for military camps will not be part of his job, he declared, except when he is specifically asked by camp commanders to provide a service not furnished by the USO and other groups already in the field.

To Be Here 3 Months

Douglas revealed he will be at his desk for three months for sure and that he then may have to return to the West Coast to make another picture. He has just finished one with Joan Crawford, called "He Kissed the Bride."

He will not bring his family to Washington, he said, and is now living at the University Club. His status with the OCD is still on a without-compensation basis, he declared, but he is endeavoring to have the name of the Arts Council, of which he was named director, changed to "something a little more specific—such as Section of Writers, Radio Actors, and Artists."

Two writings committees already are at work with the section, he said, the Hollywood Mobilization Committee and the New York War Writers Committee. The former has written and is producing a series of radio programs dramatizing the civilian defense protection program and called "Yankee Doodle 1942." After these are produced in California a master record is made and shipped to OCD, which has platters made and distributed throughout the country.

Writers Give Services

The New York committee has furnished writers without pay to the Office of Price Administration and helped the Coordinator of Information secure refugee writers for short-wave broadcasts, he said.

Mary Roberts Rinehart has written a Mother's Day proclamation for the division and Mary McCall, jr., has worked out a Mother's Day program for dramatic groups.

Art schools of the country are participating in the program by preparing posters for various Government departments. Pratt Institute, for instance, has made a series of posters for the Labor Department on children in wartime.

"We will just fill in where other agencies need us and endeavor to fill requests from throughout the country. We have a box full of requests," he said.

William Schuman To Direct Sarah Lawrence Chorus

Bronxville, New York, April 22.—William Schuman is director of the Sarah Lawrence College Chorus which, with the Dance Club from the college, will give a concert Saturday evening, April 25, in Pierce Hall, Washington, D. C., for the benefit of the college scholarship fund.

SCHUMAN

One of America's foremost young composers, Schuman has had two of his newest symphonies presented by the Boston, New York and Cleveland Symphony orchestras this season. In the fall, Koussevitzky played his Third Symphony in Boston and New York, where it was acclaimed by Olin Downes as "the best work by an American of the rising generation." In January Rodzinski and the Cleveland Orchestra played his Fourth Symphony, which was written in honor of the 100th anniversary of the New York Philharmonic Society. In addition, Schuman's works include the increasingly popular American Festival Overture, written in 1939 for Koussevitzky's concerts of American music, several choral works, chamber music works and a concerto for piano and orchestra.

Born in New York in 1910, Mr. Schuman was graduated from Columbia University, and studied composition with Max Persin, Charles Haubiel and Roy Harris. He attended the Salzburg, Austria, Mozarteum Academy, and in 1936 joined the faculty of Sarah Lawrence College, where he conducts a class in composition and directs the chorus of 90 students. They will come to Washington under the sponsorship of local alumnae of the college, headed by Mrs. Richard Dyer.

Third Moslem Convicted for Draft Evasion

The third member of a Ninth Street Moslem sect to be convicted for draft evasion within a week, Elmer C. Carroll, 42, was found guilty of violating the Selective Service Act by a District Court jury yesterday.

The jurors were out of the courtroom for only five minutes before returning their verdict.

Carroll, who lives at 702 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, was charged with refusing to register for the draft on the last registration date.

After insisting that he be allowed to dispense with an attorney and defend his own case, Carroll told the jury that, according to his Moslem beliefs, he was a "citizen of the universe" and therefore could not register as a citizen of the United States. He admitted, however, that he was born here in Washington.

He quoted from the Bible in support of his claim, asserted that he was registered in Mecca as a subject of Islam, and added that he was opposed to war on principle by reason of his religion.

Cool, Dry Days Retard Va. Crops

Richmond, Va., April 22 (AP).—Warmer weather and rain are needed for small grains, hay and pastures, the weekly report of the Virginia Crop Reporting Service indicated today.

Crops made little progress during the cool, dry days of the past week, it said, although the conditions were favorable for field work and enabled farmers to get a little ahead of their usual progress at this time of year.

Hay supplies were reported becoming short in some areas. A slight improvement in apples was more than offset by a decline in peach prospects.

Scrapbook Will Be Neck High, At Least

Logan, W. Va. (AP).—Margaret Ross has picked out a job for herself. She's keeping a scrapbook on the war.

But despite the fact she already has 210 pages and hasn't even pasted in articles about MacArthur yet, she is not dismayed.

Some day, she says, her little sister, Katie, and her little brother, Johnnie, will be called upon to study about this war, and when they are, she adds, all the information will be there—between the pages of a scrapbook that shouldn't stack up more than neck high.

District Man Wins Commission

CHARLES L. HOLT, son of Dr. E. M. Holt, of 116 R Street Northeast, has been appointed a first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces and is stationed at the Southeast Air Force Training Center at Maxwell Field, Ala. He has been designated as assistant to the assistant chief of staff, G-2, and placed on duty in the public relations department. Holt attended Central High School and George Washington University and during his school years did advertising work on The Post. He was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1930

Two Georgians To Aid Slavery Charge Probe

Attorney General Biddle appointed two Georgia lawyers yesterday to help direct an investigation by a Federal grand jury at Macon, Ga., into "the alleged slavery practices of William Tolliver Cunningham, of Lexington, Ga."

The lawyers, who will have the rank of special assistant to the Attorney General, are Barry Wright, of Rome, and William Anderson Sutherland, of Atlanta. They will cooperate with T. Hoyt Davis, United States attorney for the Middle District of Georgia, in the investigation.

The Justice Department said in a statement that it had complaints of Cunningham had established "a system of slavery on his Oglethorpe County plantation."

"According to the complaints," the Department said, "Oglethorpe County court records show that Cunningham has repeatedly charged Negro field hands who left or "escaped" his employment with past misdemeanors, reemploying them after their arrest and after short terms on the chain gang.

"The complaints allege that Cunningham recruited a substantial part of his plantation labor from local jails by paying the fines of Negro prisoners and, in some instances, arranging for their bond and for the subsequent dismissal of charges against them. On one occasion, the complaints charge, Cunningham accompanied an Oglethorpe County officer to Chicago, Ill., to assist in an unsuccessful attempt to extradite three former employes whom he had caused to be indicted after leaving his employment."

'Department of Confusion' Straightens Things Out!

Mr. Maney Tips Off New Play and the Navy; Cary Grant Rejoins the Victory Caravan; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE WEEK'S MAJOR EXHILARATION, to date, was the brief visit from Dick Maney, the Pooh-Bah of publicists, in town between trains—or maybe it was planes—as a harried and hurried harbinger of Jane Cowl in "Punch and Julia," following "High Kickers" at the National.

JANE COWL

Announcing himself as "Chief of the Department of Complete Confusion," the razor-edged Mr. Maney quite obviously was attempting to establish himself at once as a high Government functionary entitled to some sort of typographical priority. He went on to explain that he had taken on the Cowl enterprise overnight, upon the induction into the service of his country of Francis Robinson, Katharine Cornell's biographer and an all-around young intellectual of the theater, who first had had the cymbal-whanging in charge. Mr. Robinson, he further pointed out, was the most flabbergasted of the lot. Expecting to be turned up—or down—by the Navy medical examiners, as the hopeless victim of a majority of mankind's most malicious maladies, Francis, to his vast pride and jubilation, was classified as the most perfect physical specimen extant—next, possibly, to Victor Mature. His friends are momentarily expecting the flash that the two-ocean Navy now not only is complete but is even slopping over into a third!

Incidentally, Mr. Maney bore down a bit on the fact that Miss Cowl's leading man in the new Batson play is Arthur Margetson. Mr. Margetson will be recalled as the splendid actor who made such an agreeable impression with Cornelia Otis Skinner in Guy Bolton's dramatization of W. Somerset Maugham's "Theatre," under the John Golden aegis.

Cary Grant, 'way up there in the top flight of Hollywood stars, has rejoined the Hollywood Victory Caravan for Army and Navy Relief, to break out its key city tour in Loew's Capitol Theater, a week from tonight. Originally announced as one of the big "names" of the troupe, Grant was forced to withdraw because of production schedules. Adjustments now have been made, however, which permit him to rejoin the cast, which now numbers 22 stars of the first rank—23. If Groucho Marx succeeds in matching Grant's skill as a schedule fixer. The special train bringing all this luminosity from the West Coast to the Capital is expected to blaze into town Wednesday morning, April 29, exact hour to be announced.

Back From Down Under

Harry Hunter, elevated some five or six years ago to the managing directorship of Paramount interests in Australia from a decade or two of branch managing the company's interests in the Washington territory, has returned to the United States from the Antipodes and will be back in the Capital this weekend to visit old friends. Harry, so I am told by Joe Morgan, one of the cofounders of the Crandall Theaters (now Warner Brothers) and his old sidekick, now is in New York, itching to grab a rattler and pick up his reservations at the Willard. If "Red" Silverstein, the M.-G.-M. executive briefly celebrated here yesterday, and Harry can be got together, some tall tales of nonplusing the Nips ought to be on tap. We'll be letting you know—when, as and if.

And speaking of returning voyagers, Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.; the radiant "Chic" and up-and-coming "Cracker" are back from their Florida vacation, dragging that alleged sailfish around with them wherever they go. Our suggestion was a snapshot. To make good Danieloew Terrell's advance notices, the piscatorial sloop will have to be at least 17 feet long and weigh a ton!

It is Roland Robbins, manager of the Trans-Lux Theater, who calls up to say that there is a news clip coming up in the new bill, opening tomorrow, that should be of immediate interest to Washington. In it, or so Mr. Robbins has been advised, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Ambassador to the United States, outlines a plan for winning the war. Not only winning it, but winning it in 1942. Okay, Roland, we're waiting.

Personal-Aside-to-the-Daylight-Savers Note

World Premiere of 'Saboteur' Reveals Equivocal Melodrama

By Nelson B. Bell

Lights blazed, loudspeakers boomed and the news cameras whirred as a capacity audience of high Government officials, diplomats, ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, society and a sprinkling of notables from Hollywood and New York, including Author-Director Alfred Hitchcock and Norman Lloyd, of the cast, milled in and out of RKO-Keith's Theater for the world premiere of "Saboteur" last night.

HITCHCOCK

Under the sponsorship of Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, Washington columnists and radio commentators, the intramural portions of the program were concluded by brief appearances on the stage of Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Lloyd and the introduction by Master of Ceremonies Drew Pearson, from the stage, of distinguished members of the audience, among them former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, stanch friend of the FBI; Senators Truman and Brewster, who have a special interest in sabotage, and Col. Starling, veteran of the White House Secret Service staff.

This gala introductory of the latest of the Hitchcock contributions to the cinema's library of gooseflesh literature over, "Saboteur" this morning will open its regular public run on Fifteenth Street as a taut and timely screen treatise on the sinister purposes of the enemies of democracy loose within our patient borders and the shrewd deviltry of their methods.

Conviction Slowly Runs Out

In fashioning "Saboteur," Hitchcock laid no claim to having incubated a great historical document. What he may insist upon with a fair measure of justification is the creation of an entertainment that will exert an unfailing appeal to that segment of the public that finds its most enjoyable relaxation in the contemplation of a screen play that has the temerity to combine touches of the "Western" with the more exciting qualities of cops-and-robbers drama and a slight trace of boy-meets-girl.

Initiating the action with a disastrous bit of incendiary sabotage in a California airplane plant, the author-director launches at once into an exposition of that subtle manipulation of events that has made him famous as a master of suspense by means of suspended action and audience speculation. Any number of things might have happened and it is not until some time later that the spectator is permitted to discover precisely which one did. The young American factory worker, to whom the enemy agents deflect every appearance of guilt for the Glendale catastrophe that cost the life of his closest friend, seems on the way to another single-handed triumph of virtue, when developments lead suddenly away from the picturesque Western country of camouflaged enemy hideouts, caches of hidden instruments of destruction and masquerading ranch owners, to a New York mansion in which a seemingly patriotic dowager is being magnificently duped by her opulent friends of the fifth column.

At this point Mr. Hitchcock parted company with his muse and permitted his melodrama to become a pretty tawdry carnival of extravagances that terminate in the violent death of the gentleman of the title on the Statue of Liberty, at the hands of the boy that met the girl and here makes his conquest complete. In its mounting eagerness for thrills, "Saboteur" loses force as a valuable public document in direct proportion to its lack of plausibility and conviction. One fears, a little against his will, that it will not take rank as a major Hitchcock achievement.

Imagination Has Its Inning

In those exciting incidents in which Barry Kane outwits the arch plotters in plain view of the audience, Hitchcock has contrived his situations cleverly. Too many times, however, he has left both Barry and the girl, Pat, in predicaments from which escape seems impossible. Evidently it was. Without revealing how, Mr. Hitchcock produces them at the next crucial moment, leaving the individual spectator to figure out how. What the spectator usually figures out is that it couldn't be done.

Robert Cummings and Priscilla Lane, in the costellar roles, when not tossed flagrantly misplaced lines, sustain a nice balance of masculine uprightness and feminine vacillation. Norman Lloyd, as the titular character, is on scene only at the very beginning and end of the picture, but makes a lastingly obnoxious impression—as he should—in those brief intervals. Otto and Alma Kruger, as the two master minds of iniquity, are smooth in roles that could do with a shade of believability. Vaughan Glazer contributes a fine moment or two as a kindly, blind philosopher and Alan Baxter scores nicely as second in command of the espionage.

A Little Rest After Shattering That Speed Record

the Cherino, Tex., gift to the cinema, who recently stepped off 840 taps to the minute in her "target range" dance in Paramount's production of "True to the Army." Believe it or not, Miss Miller's dance, executed on the stage of the Los Angeles Biltmore Theater, was paced by a machine gun. It was on that stage, with George White "Scandals," that her tap dancing first won her a motion picture contract

Eat Six Roast Pigs for Movie

Malayans, Polynesians and other dark-skinned natives appearing in RKO-Radio's "The Tuttles of Tahiti" settled down to serious effort, when Director Charles Vidor filmed a scene of feasting.

At the colorful wedding of Peggy Drake, as Tamara, to Jon Hall, playing Chester Tuttle, this was the bill of fare served to 200 players: Six roast pigs, 24 baked chickens, 200 baked sweet potatoes, 200 baked Irish potatoes, four stalks of bananas and 24 dozen oranges.

In Bathing Suit

Veronica Lake, blonde temptress, wears a bathing suit for the first time on the screen in "Sullivan's Travels." Always before, her trim legs have been covered by long dresses.

Palace

The boys who filmed "To the Shores of Tripoli" certainly were cooking with gas, as the saying has it, when they put Technicolor to work on Marine uniforms, Maureen O'Hara's beauty and target practice on a night-black sea. With John Payne and Randolph Scott in the dominant roles, the film begins a second week this morning at the Palace.

Lamar Trotti's snappy script proves once more how a skillful writing job can carry a story as familiar as an old toothbrush. The yarn is so swiftly paced your seeming omniscience forgets itself while the outer man enjoys a vicarious career as an enlisted man in the United States Marines. Seldom has a picture served an armed service so well as a potential recruiting agency.

Maybe the Marine Corps isn't quite so fine a body of men as "To the Shores of Tripoli" makes out; if it isn't the Marines certainly won't let on and where else are you to get such first hand information?

Writer Trotti has put lusty good humor into all his scenes, with stars and players getting exactly the right punch into them. Upstart society squirt Payne bluffs his way into drilling his company and, thanks to fighting ability, makes a good job of it. When he tries to bluff Nurse O'Hara into sympathy, he gets the mustard treatment and likes it. And when the Marines we've been watching go into sea duty, look for a spectacle unfamiliar to the screen—guns booming from battleships to light up the night like a sky of northern lights.

With its fine production details, made more splendid in Technicolor, "To the Shores of Tripoli" is a service salute of the highest order, worthy of its fighting Marines.

"Churchill's Island," a sturdy tribute to the British spirit which held off the Nazi hordes in the rock-bottom days of September, 1940, also continues on the Palace screen, an admirable supporting feature on a bill that is engrossing besides being exceptionally timely.

Stars of Silents Together Again

Two of the biggest stars of silent pictures are working together in "The Mayor of 44th Street," co-starring Anne Shirley and George Murphy.

In front of the camera in the role of an ex-convict is Richard Barthelmess, now a fine character actor. Back of the camera, as an assistant director, is Wesley "Freckles" Barry, one of the most popular kids of silent movies. The two met for the first time since 1925 on "The Mayor of 44th Street" set.

Nothing Like Dip To Freshen Up

Four proud parents were dunked in a lake the other day.

The victims were Olive Blakeney and John Litel, who portray Henry Aldrich's worried parents in the current Paramount comedy, and Olin Howlin and Isobel Withers, parents of the trouble-making "Dizzy."

The dunking incident took place several times at Lake Enchante, Malibu, where the "Henry and Dizzy" company is filming a boat sequence, with Jimmy "Henry" Lydon guiding the course of a new motorboat.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, April 22.

A group of M.-G.-M. writers were matching stories about their studio, and agreed that this was the best: It concerned Robert Taylor, who was seeking a salary increase. "See L. B. Mayer yourself," the star's agent advised. "He'd battle with me, but he likes you. Tell him boldly that you deserve a raise . . . Taylor did just that. "L. B.," he said, "I deserve a raise. Please give it to me." . . . Mayer looked up slowly, cleared his throat, and said: "As Mayer to Taylor, we can talk about this proposed raise and come to some decision. But I'm a man who never had a son. Ever since you've been here, you've felt like a son to me. As a father discussing money with his son, I want to tell you that you can't have any more." . . . Taylor left. Outside the office, his agent asked: 'Well, did you get the raise?" . . . "No," said Taylor, "I got a father."

ROBERT TAYLOR

The Mutual chain has been unable to broadcast "The Aussies & The Yanks Are Coming"—the hit song written by Pvt. Johnny Nauer while he was en route to Australia—because no copyright clearance has as yet been arranged . . . Last week Mike Varallo, uncle of Lou (Abbott &) Costello, arrived in Hollywood from Paterson, N. J. Lou prepared a long series of entertainments for him. On the first night, Mike received a kiss from Lana Turner. He immediately cancelled the rest of the planned entertainment, explaining that it would be anticlimactic . . . Nobody knows what became of the $135,000 found on the Japs now interned on Ellis Island.

On May 9 the World Theater will present the premiere of "Native Land," the Marc Blitzstein movie for which Paul Robeson did the commentary. This film has been financed by more people than has any other movie in the history of the industry . . . Blitzstein, who twice won the Guggenheim Award, wrote the movie in 1939. When the production was halted for lack of funds, he raised money at concerts, parties, benefit shows, etc. Jo Davidson contributed a sculpture, which was auctioned off and the receipts used to continue making the movie. The Whitneys contributed. Altogether, more than 5000 contributors answered the call.

Pat Hitchcock, the 12-year-old actress who made her debut this season in "Solitaire," may return to Broadway in Paul Osborn's dramatization of "Highway In Jamaica" . . . Al Lackey vows publicly that never again will he speak to his former wife, Sophie Tucker. "I refuse to talk to her," Lackey explains, "because she gave me the air" . . . The war-story of the week is about the Japanese spy who sent a message back to Tokio reporting that Americans were becoming pessimistic. "Things Very Bad in United States" the spy hopefully assured. "Big Food Shortage. Shortage So Bad, Everybody Walk Around, And Say 'What's Cookin'?"

Sunday night Lord Marley was the principal speaker at a dinner, where he discussed Russia's current campaign. He cited figures to describe how rich were the Soviet resources, and how vast the population there. "In Russia, for example, 60 babies are born every second of the day," said Lord Marley. "In fact, from the moment we sat down to dinner here, until now, 856,700 babies were born in Russia" . . . Danny Kaye, who was the next speaker, stated: "What his Lordship meant to say was that the Russian bear is really a rabbit."

When Eddie Cantor was operated on at the Sydenham Hospital, he saw a score of interns seated around the arena, waiting to witness the surgery. Cantor, who was about to receive the anesthetic, sat up, and demanded: "What—no tickets?" . . . Because of the objections made by Representative Tabor, the Library of Congress is not permitted to purchase any more books. Tabor has put a ceiling on knowledge . . . Bonnie Baker, who has been assisting in the book-collection campaign, received four Manhattan phone directories from a matron. Bonnie told her: "I'm afraid that the boys in the service won't find them interesting enough to read." The matron replied: "Oh, I didn't expect them to read them—but to drop them on the Japs."

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 22.

After nearly a year of turbulent times, too strenuous for any girl her age, Gene Tierney's got all her difficulties ironed out. Says she's never felt better nor been happier. Certainly she never looked better. Her mother plans a visit soon, which means that family reconciliation's been effected. After months in the gardener's cottage, she and her husband have finished renovating the big house, and will move in directly.

GENE TIERNEY

From "Thunderbirds" she'll go into "China Girl," whose story idea Darryl Zanuck himself cooked up. After that, she's due for a six months leave from pictures, and has told her agent to start looking for a Broadway play.

Her nervous condition, which has brought on a collapse in every picture, has vanished with her troubles. Main problem now, says Gene, is finding good homes for nine kittens which one of her cats presented her recently. Well, for kitty's sake!

Paul Henreid, playing opposite Bette Davis in "Now, Voyager," is working like mad to learn "American." Of Swedish-Viennese descent, he arrived here via England, so he's got three separate accents to contend with, but says before he gets through he aims to sound just like Gary Cooper.

Sol Lesser's first picture under his new set-up with United Artists, "For the Love of Michael," is certainly going out after the femme audience. It's authored by Rose Franken, who wrote "Claudia." Frances Marion did the screen treatment, and Jane Murfin, who with Anita Loos adapted "The Women," is writing the script.

That fight scene between John Payne and Victor Mature for "Footlight Serenade" was a dilly. Lasted 4½ minutes, ended with Mature having a black eye, Payne a split lip and Greg Ratoff hysterics of delight.

Rosemary De Camp has sent a print of "Jungle Book" to her father, a mining engineer in Bolivia, who's never seen her on the screen.

Max Baer is toying with idea of opening a health farm for women hereabouts. Got the notion from his role in "Bridget from Brooklyn." Not a bad idea at that. Or is it?

Jack Oakie says he hates to dine out with plutocrats because they always out-fumble him for the check.

Barbara O'Neil is back in town after her successful Broadway appearance in Herbert Ehrmann's "Under This Roof," looking handsomer than ever.

Virginia Gilmore got a Victory Garden fit, pulled up her flowers by the roots and replanted with vegetables. The flowers, which were tossed on an ash heap, are flourishing, and she ain't seen hide nor hair of a vegetable since!

Sturges Finds Dental Drama In Ether Can

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, April 22.—Preston Sturges, the Diesel engine manufacturer and restaurant proprietor, is directing a movie that he wrote on one stage and producing one that somebody else wrote on another.

He said he wasn't particularly busy.

Sturges has before his own cameras the story of Dr. William Thomas Green Morton, the Boston dentist who, on September 30, 1846, made history by applying ether to the nose of one Fabian Frost, a musician, and removing his wisdom tooth without his knowing it. Within three months Dr. Morton's discovery of painless surgery was in use around the world. He was a hero.

And almost immediately he was a a bum. The medical profession denounced him, others claimed they discovered ether as a pain-killer, and he died 20 years later penniless and in disgrace.

For eight years Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer owned this story, but never did make a picture because of those 20 anticlimatic years. Paramount bought the yarn and Sturges fixed these two decades. He put 'em in a prologue and then went on with his story of the ordinary guy who made a great discovery and who became for one instant a great man.

Even as You and I

This morning Dr. Joel McCrea Morton had in his chair a patient, name of Vic Potel. This was before the discovery of ether.

Dr. McCrea was armed with a brace and bit, such as carpenters use, a heavy mallet, some chisels, and other tools which Sturges guaranteed to be as authentic as they were brutal.

The doctor headed toward his victim with the brace and bit. Potel stuck his foot against Dr. McCrea's chest to hold him back.

"Will you open your mouth?" asked the doctor.

"O-w-w-w-w-w!" yelped Potel.

"What are you trying to do?" demanded the dentist, glancing apprehensively toward the ground glass door to his waiting room. "Ruin my business?"

"You're trying to ruin me," screamed Potel.

"Open your mouth and keep your trap shut," snapped Dr. McCrea.

He put his finger into Potel's mouth. Potel bit him.

"Oo-ouch," yelled the doctor.

This was too much for the patients in the anteroom. Dr. McCrea saw their shadows on the ground glass as they sneaked away.

"Tomorrow we get to the big scene," said Sturges when this was safely canned. "Bill Demarest plays the musician who gets his tooth pulled painlessly. Only first the doc sends out for ether and the druggist sends the wrong kind. Demarest takes a deep sniff of that, and goes nuts. Plumb bugs. He jumps out of the chair, runs into the hall, and dives out of the window. He lands on an awning and runs down the street yelling. Ought to be funny, I hope."

The film currently is titled "Triumph Over Pain." This is a good title, but paramount doesn't like it because of that word, "pain." The experts claim it keeps customers out of theaters in droves.

"So I suggested calling it The Boston Dentist,'" Sturges said, "but they threw up their hands at that. Said it sounded like a painless dentist ad. That's what it is."

Columbia

By now it is pretty well accepted that "The Courtship of Andy Hardy" is about the best of that family's numerous screen adventures—of which, incidentally, this is the twelfth. It begins its second F Street run this morning at the Columbia.

This time we find Andy playing big brother to a charming young thing who has had the temerity to develop a crush on him. The girl's parents' divorce proceedings before Judge Hardy have tossed this bookish subdeb right in Andy's lap—part of a mutual assistance pact with his father. Being a young man of the big city as well as Carvel, Andy shows the miss the ways of glamour and soon she's the belle of the ball; yes, her romantic attachment is resolved to leave Andy in the clear.

It seems superfluous to add that Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Sara Haden, Cecilia Parker and Ann Rutherford (the latter only momentarily) have their familiar roles; newcomer to the Carvel circle is Donna Reed, luscious lass, indeed.

To Shoulder Arms

Twenty-one male members of the huge chorus used in "Yankee Doodle Dandy" have passed their physical examinations and are on 24-hour call for Army duty.

Kosleck in 'Past'

Martin Kosleck, veteran stage and screen character actor, recently reported to work at M-G-M after being signed for an important role in "Out of the Past," with Conrad Veidt and Ann Ayars.

Rocking Chair No Allure to Menjou

There'll be no retirement for Adolphe Menjou, curently co-starring with Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper in "Syncopation." The men he has known who have retired from careers as active as his has been, he declares, are all under the sod.

"By the time someone like myself reaches an age when retirement is possible," he explains, "the change from active to retired life is too great. Suddenly there's nothing urgent to do, no responsibility. He relaxes, a mental and physical letdown comes, and down go barriers against the diseases and disintegration of age.

Favorite Author

Bob Hope would rather be complimented on the book he wrote than for screen roles or radio work. The masculine star of "My Favorite Blonde" hopes to write film plays.

Whizzed Through College

Broderick Crawford was a student at Harvard. He lasted 20 minutes, cashed in his tuition for a ticket to Broadway.

Extra by Day, 'Big Shot' Nights

You can't always tell from appearances.

There's an extra working on the Paramount set where "Road to Morocco" is filming with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in the star roles, who takes orders during the day and gives them himself at night.

His name is "Cap" Somers and he plays a humble Arab villager in rags and brown grease paint. Just one of the mob. But he holds the rank of major in the State Guard. He was an intelligence officer during the last war and he has a son who is flying a bomber for the U. S. A. somewhere in the Far East.

Six Sarongs

Although Dorothy Lamour made the sarong famous, "Beyond the Blue Horizon" is only the sixth of her 24 films in which she has worn the garment.

No Salt for Dennis

Dennis Morgan, an ardent fisherman, won't go deep-sea fishing. He says it's too easy compared to fishing for trout.

Taxi Operators

Chairman Hankin of the Public Utilities Commission has taken a step in the right direction in recommending that all local taxis participate in the rush-hour, 20-cent pickup service. He is, of course, primarily interested in making greater use of taxi seating capacity, less than half of which is now being used. This is a sensible objective and one which, if realized, would help meet Washington's critical transportation situation.

But it is one thing to order taxis to operate under the pickup service and quite another thing to insure their actual appearance on the streets during rush hours. At present half of the local cabs are theoretically participating in the pickup service. As Mr. Hankin points out, however, the operators of many of these cabs stay off the streets during rush hours because they resent the fact that competitors can charge full fare. Forcing all operators into the pickup service would, of course, eliminate this resentment. But there would still be no assurance of a maximum number of cabs operating during rush hours.

The PUC reveals that for various personal reasons which have nothing to do with participation in the pickup service. many cab drivers go off duty just when public demand is at its peak. Normally, this would not make business sense. But it is a fact—attested by Mr. Hankin's threat to find some way of forcing taxis to give service when it is most needed. Such a threat clearly implies that Washington's taxis may be destined for even more stringent regulation in the public interest. This would certainly be supported by the overwhelming majority of prospective passengers, who stand and wait. For this reason, if for no other, operators would be well advised to work with, not against, the PUC chairman.

Patent Seizures

The executive order for the seizure of all patents controlled either directly or indirectly by enemy powers is amply justified as an emergency measure. For, as the President says, "America must take everything it needs, because the first thing to do is to win the war." But this essential emergency action does not obviate the need for changes in the patent laws. Indeed, Senator Bone, chairman of the Patents Committee, points out that the executive order will enable the committee to give more careful study to permanent revision of those laws.

At the moment, of course, interest centers on patent pools or agreements to which American and German concerns have been parties. It is well to keep in mind, however, that such agreements, formed in time of peace, were neither illegal nor considered detrimental to our national interest. On the contrary, by giving American firms knowledge of foreign patented processes that otherwise would have remained unknown to them, international patent pools have undoubtedly operated in many instances to the advantage of the United States and to furtherance of our war effort. Domestic concerns that have acquired the right to use foreign patents have, moreover, often spent large sums on experimental operations and upon improvement of the original patents.

It would be a pity, therefore, to put a stop for all time to this kind of helpful international cooperation. But if or when contacts are resumed after the war, legal safeguards must be set up to prevent a repetition of the conditions uncovered by the Department of Justice. More is involved than a reform of the patent laws alone. It will be necessary to reconsider the whole problem of international cartels, involving division of world markets, price and production control agreements.

Patents have unquestionably done a great deal to strengthen and perpetuate such international cartels, by enabling their owners to dictate terms and methods of use in foreign countries. For instance, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold declares that foreign interests have had the right to determine where and how American companies may sell certain military supplies. Mr. Arnold also says it is "probable that vital military information has been disclosed to foreign companies through the requirement of itemized descriptive royalty payments in patent license agreements."

The war has cut the dangerous ties that formerly bound American industry to allen enemy concerns. But that is not enough. Care must be taken to see that they are not restored except with governmental approval and under continuous governmental supervision of the working arrangements thus established. Only in that way can we hope to obtain in the future the undeniable benefits of international industrial cooperation without incurring the political risks incidental to such agreements.

Can Japan Take It?

Equally as important as the point of origin of the American planes that bombed Japan is the reaction of the Japanese people to the bombing. Our men and our armament eventually will beat the Japanese. But psychology is now a vital branch of military science, and if we are to expedite victory we must seek to understand our enemy. The trouble is that we start with a very sketchy knowledge of him. Japanese always have screened themselves from foreigners by an incorrigible tendency to hide the truth and disguise their opinions. For that reason even foreigners who have lived a long time in Japan are at variance in their conclusions. Yet in seeking to assay the initial Japanese reactions to the bombings, these authorities have been helped by the revelations coming out of Japan itself. Immediately after the bombing Mamoru Shigemitsu went on the air and spoke words of reassurance to the Japanese people. Having been Ambassador to London, he had been through a lot of bombing. And he told his fellow countrymen that the visitation which they had just experienced was as nothing compared with the bombing that the British had endured. Then he made the remark that the people must be careful lest the British and the Americans laugh at them.

To those who do not know the Japanese that was a curious way of restoring calm. But it is readily explicable. One facet of the Japanese character that cannot be hidden is their inferiority complex. They are sensitive to a degree to foreign opinion. The reason is often given that Japan has a borrowed civilization which continues to imitate things abroad even down to the most finicky details. However, that is not the whole explanation. After all, we borrowed our civilization, but we do not feel supersensitive about it. But the Japanese are a childlike people not given to much thought—in the sense of scientific study—about themselves. All such efforts at self-understanding seem to them a waste of time for which they have no intellectual aptitude. All they know is that they are in debt to foreigners, particularly to the Chinese, and they resent it, particularly as they feel they are touched with a divine mission.

That the people were shaken by the bombing—as must be inferred from the Shigemitsu address—may thus be a natural consequence of these traits in the Japanese make-up. That does not mean that the Japanese are cowardly. On the contrary, the Japanese have a valor which has been proved on more than one battleground in this war. But courage to face the unknown calls for a different psychology from the courage to meet and conquer the known. The Japanese, like the Germans, lack the resiliency to deal with situations which are unscheduled. The German lives according to plan, and the Japanese guides his actions according to rules of behavior. Both ways of life are substitutes for the individual character which is the main reliance of the English-speaking peoples. And neither affords any preparation for the unforeseen. This was proved in the Japanese earthquake of 1923, when Japanese ran amok and slit the throats of all Koreans in sight. It was then shown that the Japanese, far from having an Oriental calm, are subject to what one writer calls "social typhoons." These are products of the volatility which doubtless attacked many Japanese when the bombs arrived and which Mr. Shigemitsu was put on the air to assuage.

Men With Dependents

The War Department deserves considerable credit for going out of its way to meet the problem of dependency. Several weeks ago the department announced a plan whereby men who are potential officer material, but who are reluctant to volunteer because of obligations to dependents, may attend officer training camps and receive commissions six months after entering the Army. The primary purpose of the plan is, of course, to obtain able officers. But an important incidental purpose is to make such prospective volunteers aware of the fact that officer pay sufficient to support dependents is within their grasp.

Moreover, the department now suggests a plan, subject to Congressional approval, which is designed to meet the basic needs of the dependents of privates and noncommissioned officers. According to the plan, a soldier may contribute up to $25 a month to the support of dependents—a sum which will be matched, or in some cases exceeded, by a Government contribution. Both plans are obviously intended to serve as an incentive to voluntary enlistments and to allay the personal misgivings of men with dependents. Naturally, there is no question but that the plans involve some degree of sacrifice on the part of the men and their dependents. For service pay in most cases is not and cannot be equivalent to civilian pay.

Nevertheless, in spite of the fact that the Army stands to gain much-needed man power through the wide acceptance of the plans, the War Department should not have to be preoccupied with family well-being. This should be the concern of Congress. In the months ahead the Army will have to draw more and more men with dependents into service. It is a process which is already under way and which can be facilitated by prompt Congressional approval either of the War Department's plan for men in the lower ranks or of some equally effective measure.

Matter Of Balance

War production, Donald Nelson recently stated, is largely a matter of balance—of weighing requirements against each other, of eliminating bottlenecks and of smoothing out the flow of parts and materials. In the first instance, this is the job of the War Production Board. But it goes without saying that the WPB can get nowhere without maximum cooperation from management and labor. Moreover, maximum cooperation demands not only the literal observance of WPB rulings, but also the incessant application of industrial intelligence in front offices as well as in the shops. This is absolutely essential, if we are to achieve the production miracles now required. Yet we are faced with mounting evidence that this is not sufficiently understood in quarters where it should be best appreciated—that is, in some of the front offices.

There are several cases in point. Take, for example, suits pending against the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. and the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. The suits were urged by the WPB, which charges "repeated, deliberate" priority violations. Now both corporations have denied the charges and the accompanying allegation that large quantities of critically needed iron and steel have been diverted to favored private customers at the expense of the needs of the armed forces and of the Maritime Commission. Both corporations may, perhaps, clear themselves of the charges. But the WPB has also accused half a dozen other companies of priority violations, and, at this point, it looks very much as though additional companies will be similarly accused.

Take, also, the case of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. which the Navy has commandeered, under Presidential order, because the company's management "has not proved adequate. . . ." Then there is the disconcerting—and well-publicized—evidence amassed by the senatorial investigators of patent cartels and business practices detrimental to the war effort. Later on it may be established that some of the Government charges in separate instances are without foundation and are perhaps bound up with now familiar efforts to discredit big business. But some of the charges will almost certainly be sustained. And if, as we suspect, this proves to be the case, the Nation will have indisputable proof that, somewhere along the line, production intelligence is, consciously or unconsciously, at fault.

When Donald Nelson said that war production is largely a matter of balance, he naturally assumed 100 per cent industrial willingness to concentrate on war objectives. If such willingness is in any degree lacking, or if willingness is present and managerial ability is lacking, the sooner the country knows about it, the greater will be the pressure to surmount such costly deficiencies.

Medal For Malta

Nowhere in the world has civilian endurance under fire been tested more effectively than in the island fortress of Malta. Almost every day for two years—sometimes many times a day—Axis bombers from Sicily, only 60 miles away, have unloaded their lethal cargoes on every conceivable Maltese objective, military and civilian. As a result, many Maltese were long since forced to abandon their homes and to set up housekeeping in neighboring caves. But ability to become accustomed to such abnormal living arrangements is not remarkable. Residents in other areas under fire have had to make similarly drastic concessions.

What is remarkable about Malta, however, is the fact that its stanch spirit has remained an inspiration to free men everywhere. The King of England has just recognized this spirit by awarding Malta the George Cross for heroism and devotion. It is an action without precedent, and is richly deserved. Before this war is over other Allied communities may be subjected to ordeals paralleling Malta's. If so, let us pray that, with or without official recognition, Malta's noble example will not stand alone.

SORROW

Will I forget this sorrow
If I walk up this hill?
I shall stand there bare headed
To watch the dark sea.

On the rough grass-grown cliff-top
I stand alone.
Let the salt wind blow through me,
Make me clean and fresh.

The white sea-gulls turn and dip,
Crying down the wind.
I shall smother my sorrow
In the steel-gray sea.

Nudism

As a student of sociology and a lover of simple justice, I find myself compelled to say a word regarding this Parmelee-Dies controversy. It is a well-known sociological fact that any change from customary usage is opposed by the masses in its initiation. But where would we be if this opposition were not eventually challenged and overruled? And it might be well to point out that some brave, courageous souls are called upon to play the part of martyr (in one form or another) in this process.

It is also another sociological truism that what we accept and consider as "good" and "moral" (incidentally, the word stems from the word "mores," which means "custom") is based on the established custom and practices of the group. For example, a recent sociological study by some young woman (among the Central American tribes, I believe it was), has shown that the men of some tribes have essentially "feminine" traits (according to our own criteria) and they consider it well and proper that this should be the case; and it is cited in sociological reference books that some tribesmen in hot countries, when given clothing and raiment by the white man, confess to a feeling of shame and indecency, just as we might feel on going nude—at least until custom, established perhaps on the thesis that vitamin-supplying sunshine on all of the surface of the body was essential to perfect health, changed our attitude. And perhaps the "moralist" that such a man as Dies thinks himself to be might be made to understand that if nudism were accepted as natural and customary, there might be far less salacious implication in the nude than in the suggestive display of tantalizing glimpses of the female anatomy (if that is the way the masculine mind is trained to see it).

Is there no way to save ourselves from the tyranny fraught of narrowness and intolerance that such a man as Dies represents in our society? I have no possible brief for nudism. I should feel at least as unhappy and uncomfortable as when the skirts go up too high for a stout figure and knobby knees, such as my own. I am sure the only reasons I could possibly have to influence me to take up the cudgel—not in the cause, necessarily—but for the right of any man to espouse it freely and decently without being exposed to vulgar-minded "smearing" by lesser men, are (1) my love of the beautiful—and I have seen young bodies too lovely to be covered up; and (2) the certain knowledge that the "indecency" and "salaciousness" is in the mind of the critic—not in the advocate—of such a cause.

In fact, it is actually a lack of imagination—the inability to conceive of a different way of looking at things—that is at the bottom of such a controversy between supposedly respectable men on both sides. It is the difference between the conservative and the progressive—the one who holds back to the old for fear of the unknown, and the philosophic, poetic mind which can grasp a new idea readily and who is so innately high-minded and clean-minded that he cannot conceive of the storm of mistaken prejudice which he brings down so innocently and unwillingly upon his astonished head until he becomes the unnecessary victim of it.

War Ethics

If the report from Tokyo that Allied planes have bombed schools and hospitals in Tokyo is true, and if it was done deliberately, I am shocked and horrified. I can hardly believe it, but if it is true, I don't see what we are fighting for. I thought our side was supposed to be fighting to preserve civilization, decency, liberty and Christian ideals, and to banish ruthless, barbaric aggression from the world. But if we ever bomb hospitals and schools or any other nonmilitary objective, we prove ourselves to be no better, no more civilized or decent than our foes whom we so despise and denounce. It makes no difference if they bomb our hospitals or schools; we still should not bomb theirs. To do so would be the very antithesis of Christ's teachings, which we profess to uphold as our standard of conduct.

We should never forget that only a small proporation of the people in our enemy countries are actually responsible for the aggression and crimes which those nations have committed. Undoubtedly a good many of the people there hate and deplore the actions of their government and leaders, but they are powerless to do anything about it. Probably more of them have had their minds so warped by clever propaganda and intensive teaching since they were little children that they believe in the righteousness of their fighting and all their governments' actions. Even for this they are not exactly to blame.

Let all the United Nations demonstrate by their actions, both during and after the war, that they do really stand and fight for higher principles of civilization. If there is to be any hope of establishing a genuine, lasting peace based on a new world order of justice, democracy, brotherhood and cooperation after this world war is over, the victors—who we hope and trust will be the United Nations—must forget all thoughts of revenge, must purge their souls of hatred for the masses of the people in the now enemy countries. They must refrain as far as possible from all acts against the Axis people which would arouse their justified and inextinguishable hatred. If such a peace is not the aim of this war, on the part of the United Nations, and if it is not achieved, then the whole terrible, titanic struggle is not worth while; the men who have died and are dying so bravely, believing that they are sacrificing their lives that peace and happiness with liberty and justice may at last prevail on this earth, will have died in vain. If the stupid, selfish, shortsighted blunders that the Allies made after the first World War are repeated, this hell will have to be gone through again in a few years.

Let us all work and pray and study with earnest concentration that this shall be the last war to curse the world!

Peter Pan

I have read with the utmost interest the article on Peter Pan in this morning's Post by Violet Alleyn Storey. I used to go to Kensington Gardens some years ago, and I always thought of that statue of Peter Pan as the real embodiment of childhood. I have often wondered what had become of the statue and had asked a friend of mine about it, but, up to now, have had no answer to my question. I was so pleased, therefore, to read Miss Storey's article in your paper and to know that Peter Pan was safe and that when better days return the little statue may be restored to its former place in Kensington Gardens to gladden the hearts of little children in years to come.

Nursery Care For Defense

Nursery care for the children of working mothers should be a part of civilian defense work, and should be organized in each community as such. Why can't we have two homes selected and approved by the Children's Protective Association in each community—one for pre-school children and one for elementary school children. Having three day nurseries located in this city can not be as convenient as a place in each community.

In any neighborhood, for instance, I see pre-school children running all over the streets just being missed by cars and trucks while mother is busy at work confident that the maid who is well paid is taking good care of them. I see school children coming home to an empty house with no one to look after them or supervise their after school work and play. What is more important after all than our children even in these times, when we are fighting to make their future secure.

I am tied at home because I have an infant and pre-school child and I cannot do defense work, but I would consider taking care of the pre-school children of mothers in my community, doing my part. Such houses could be plainly marked with a symbol designating them as the community nursery. The air raid warden could look over the situation to see that all protective measures were taken for the sake of the community's children and rescue squads would know where they were should we be unfortunate enough to be attacked from the air.

After all, I don't feel that I can run around informing my neighbors that I am in the business and want to board their children, nor do I want to advertise myself as the most fit person in the community to do the job. But if civilian defense officials got their heads together and decided that community nurseries under civilian defense was the answer to the working mother's prayer which I think it is, I would gladly offer my services as would many others, and would consider it an honor should I qualify for the position.

I can feed my own child three glasses of fruit juice, one quart of milk, two fresh green vegetables—(I use either fresh or frozen foods so that he gets full vitamin content) egg, potatoes, bread and butter and some kind of whole fruit for 60 cents per day. Therefore, I could charge $6 for seven days, and $5 for six days board and could feed the children well and pay a maid to do my housework while I spent my time looking after the children and supervising their play. I could even afford extra equipment necessary for caring for a large group if I were not out for profit, which I am not. It need not be necessary for a person to pay $50 per month for their child's care as stated in your news article about the working mothers' predicament if the neighborhood mothers got together and worked out a community nursery. Less than a dollar a day would provide a child with everything and the nursery mother can make enough to make it worth her while. Besides, I think it is the patriotic duty of all communities to have such a plan.

Lost Work Days

Those forces in the country and in Congress who are trying to pass restrictive legislation to curb the power of organized labor, on the ground that strikes are seriously interfering with war production, are making a serious mistake. Any strike in a war industry at present makes the front page, and for the past several weeks there has been no mention of such strikes, which is adequate proof that the no-strike pledge given by the leaders of organized labor both in the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. is being faithfully respected by the rank and file members.

On the other hand, the chief of the division of industrial hygiene, a part of the United States Public Health Service, informs me that only an average of eight days each year were lost by workers on account of illness in 1941, or approximately 400 million days of work lost this past year. This is over 16 times the amount of time lost from work on account of strikes in 1941, and does not take into account the almost complete elimination of strikes in the war industries since Pearl Harbor.

According to Prof. Irving Fisher, whose studies on national health are classic, about one-half of this illness is preventable if proper Government health measures are taken.

St. George For Merrie England

It was not entirely by chance that the English chose St. George's Day, April 2, 1918, for their first great commando raid of the last war—the gallant and daring attack on the German submarine lair at Zeebrugge. By long tradition St. George, patron saint of England, has meant courage and victory to the British fighting man.

When the heroic Richard Coeur de Lion, the Crusader, was hard pressed at the siege of Antioch, St. George, it is said, appeared miraculously, leading a host of white-clad warriors to his aid. The lion-hearted Richard, on his return to England, ordered April 23 to be celebrated as St. George's Day. The saint's flag, a red cross on a white ground, became the badge of courage and the symbol of chivalry. All through the Middle Ages the English soldier went into battle wearing the red cross over his armor as a symbol of the righteousness of the cause for which he was fighting, his battle cry, "St. George for Merrie England!"

St. George, after seven centuries, is still the patron saint of England. Her fighting men no longer wear his cross, but there are Englishmen all over the world who on April 23 wear a red rose in remembrance of their patron saint and his badge of courage. Every year members of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, one of Britain's most famous orders of chivalry, meet in St. Paul's Cathedral in London to renew their vows and to commemorate the memory of Britain's most illustrious sons.

St. George is the patron saint of the Order of the Garter, founded in his honor in the middle of the fourteenth century by Edward III, who coined the famous phrase "Honi Soit qui mal y pense"—Evil be to him who evil thinks—as he retrieved the garter dropped by one of the ladies of his court.

The Order of the Garter, the most famous of them all, was originally called the Company of St. George and was a society formed to furnish soldiers of fortune to help Edward III assert his claims to the crown of France. It still maintains its original number of knights, 26, and the sovereign is its permanent head. The most brilliant decoration worn by King George VI on state occasions is the jeweled Order of St. George.

And who was this saint? Strangely enough, very little is known of his life. The most generally accepted version seems to be that he was born of noble Christian parents in Cappadocia, became a distinguished soldier at an early age and, after testifying to his faith, was tortured and put to death at Lydda, in Palestine. It is said he paid a visit to Britain and protested against the Diocletian persecutions. Two very ancient Syrian church inscriptions record his martyrdom, and a fifth-century Pope lists him as one of those "whose names are justly reverenced among men, but whose acts are known only to God."

The legend with which he is always connected is that of the slaying of the dragon. Cold realists suggest that he has been credited with the deeds of the mythical Perseus, who was supposed to have slain the sea serpent which was about to devour Andromeda, somewhere in the region of Joppa, with which part of the world St. George was connected. But surely the belief that gave inspiration to Britain's knights of the Middle Ages was that the dragon symbolized the evil and wrongdoing which they, as followers of the saint, were sworn to destroy.

Te legend was one of the most popular in England, and St. George has always been a favorite name for Britain's country inns. On one of the great highways to the south coast, in a region bombed and battered by the Nazi fliers, there still stands an ancient coaching inn. The huge sign that spans the narrow village street depicts the slaying of the dragon. Just such a sign must Will Shakespeare have had in mind when he wrote:

"St. George, that swinged the dragon, and e'er since Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door."

Shakespeare, incidentally, was born on St. George's Day.

The St. George's Cross was England's flag for centuries and is the foundation of the present Union Jack. It was the first English emblem to fly on this continent, planted in Nova Scotia by John Cabot in 1607. Just a hundred years later the flag of St. Andrew, a white cross on a blue ground, was superimposed, when the Parliaments of England and Scotland were united. Almost a century later, in 1801, the flag of St. Patrick, also a red cross on a white ground, was combined with the others when Ireland joined the parliamentary union.

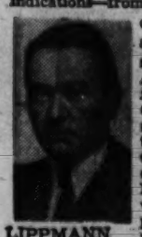
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Political Warfare

IN HIS ADDRESS at the Associated Press luncheon Mr. MacLeish told us that there were many indications—from the broadcasts out of Vichy—and from other sources—that "an Axis 'peace' offensive is in the cards for next summer." Now that the National Committee has declared that the Republican Party will recognize no peace "except peace with victory" and that it "will never entertain any proposals of peace until such victory be won," there can be no doubt anywhere in the world where the United States will be standing if our enemies in Berlin and Tokio offer us another Kurusu mission.



LIPPMANN

Mr. MacLeish was concerned, however, with the subtler and more insidious form of enemy propaganda, so effectively practiced in France, which is designed to destroy the will to fight, to divide the people, to poison our relations with our Allies, and to confuse the strategical conduct of the war. He asked how the Government and the press, having warned the people, are "going to arm them to defend themselves against" the "political warfare" of which "we, as a people, have had little knowledge and even less experience."

MR. MacLEISH is, I submit, mistaken in thinking that the United States has little knowledge and even less experience of political warfare. He has forgotten Woodrow Wilson who, as applied to the modern age of direct and immediate communication across the battle lines, was the discoverer and the first and most successful practioner of political warfare. President Wilson, moreover, knew quite well how to arm the American people against the insidious wiles of enemy propaganda. His method was not to think up what Mr. MacLeish calls "a strategy of the defense" against peace offensives from the enemy, but to conduct on his own initiative and under his own leadership a continual, grand-scale American offensive for liberty, justice, and peace.

He did not defend. He attacked. He did not reply. He made the enemy scratch his head and wonder how to reply.

WILSON'S CAMPAIGN was not initiated by the newspapers nor by the Government's propaganda agency. Nor was it publicity or propaganda as we now think of these things. Wilson's campaign was a diplomatic campaign on the highest level of policy and strategy where only the President himself can make the decisions. All great political warfare is conducted at this level—not at the level of the newspapers, or of an Office of Facts and Figures.

The circumstances under which President Wilson acted will, I think, make this clear. We entered the war in April, 1917. We were utterly unprepared, and during the first summer the Allied position in Europe was in many ways more desperate than it is now. The Russian armies had collapsed and Russia had made a separate peace. The French army was on the verge of collapse, with many signs of mutiny in the ranks and of rebellion in the civilian population. Italy had become a liability. Britain was under a submarine attack that for some months was more effectively dangerous than that which we are now dealing with. The Middle East was not merely threatened, as it is now. It was actually enemy territory under the Turkish Empire, and the domain of the Central Powers extended unbroken from Berlin to Bagdad, from near Paris as far into Russia as the German armies chose to go.

DURING the dark summer of 1917 the Allies were on the defensive everywhere, and the enemy launched repeated peace offensives designed to crack up finally their ebbing morale. In the autumn came the bolshevik revolution, followed almost immediately by the publication of the secret treaties designed in the very worst traditions of the old diplomacy. The Allied cause was, therefore, not only in a desperate military position but morally and psychologically it was on the verge of bankruptcy.

It was then, in early December of 1917, that President Wilson, having taken measures to make America the eventual decisive military factor in the war, assumed the political leadership of the Allied cause. He prepared a program of settlement and of war aims which conformed to American conceptions, was carefully calculated to supersede the secret treaties, and was formally offered to the peoples of Europe as a definition of what they might expect from the American intervention. Wilson's Fourteen Points and his subsequent declaration of policy became a body of doctrine for which the Americans and the Allies believed it righteous to fight, which the enemy peoples increasingly felt it less and less desirable to fight against.

NO ONE in his senses would imagine that President Wilson won the war by political means. The war was won by the defeat of the German armies on land, on sea, and in the air. No one will imagine that Wilson's words would have had any effect if an American army had not underwritten them in blood and iron. But there is little doubt that as the military prestige of America rose in Europe, the political effect of Wilson's diplomatic action became more and more heartening to the Allies, more and more invigorating to the conquered and the rebellious peoples within the enemy lines, more and more destructive to the enemy's own will to fight.

We are now at a stage in this war where the conditions are ripe for American political action. We have recovered from the shock of being thrown everywhere on the defensive, and our power and the resolution of the American people have reached a point where our political influence is no longer a matter of pious words and preachments. Thus we have passed the phase where we have to sit anxiously wondering how to defend ourselves against Axis propaganda and intrigue. We have come to the phase where, if we have the wisdom and imagination to realize our position, we shall cease to talk of this struggle as a war of survival and will proclaim our war to be, throughout the world, in Europe and in Asia, a war of liberation.

INSTEAD of wondering what we shall do if Berlin or Tokio offer us a fraudulent and treacherous peace, the time has come to offer our own peace based upon the liberation of all the peoples from the twin tyrannies of Berlin and Tokio. We should propose peace to the Finns. We should propose peace to the Italians. We should leave no doubt that in Asia as in Europe we are fighting for peace and liberty, not for privileges and the restoration of ancient empire.

We should, now that our two parties are at one in recognizing our responsibilities, establish the machinery, formulate the plans, and publicly and formally lay before the nations proposals under which we and our Allies will make available food, raw materials, ships, and loans for relief as soon as the enemy surrenders, and for reconstruction after an armistice has been granted.

WE CAN offer these things because we have the power to offer them and the will to use that power. As we grow in military power, what we say will become more and more convincing. We shall evoke from ourselves, from our great allies, from our hidden allies within the enemy lines, and finally from the enemy peoples themselves, the conviction that our cause, which was always just, is in the end irresistible.

That is the way political warfare is waged against tryants, and by our traditions, our vital interests, our experience, our power and our resources we have all that it takes to conduct it triumphantly.

Colombian Oil

By Jean A. Crawford

Production Palls

Bogota, Colombia.

GERMAN SUBMARINES have shelled Aruba. For Colombia, the importance of this act extends beyond the threat which it represents to hemisphere defense. Not only is 35 per cent of Colombian oil refined at Aruba, but Colombian national economy rests to a serious extent on a petroleum industry which may be severely curtailed before the end of the war.

In 1941, Colombia produced 24,572,144 barrels of oil, which came from the De Mares (Standard) and Barco (Texas-Socony) concessions. This is a marked decrease over 1940—a decrease of vital importance to the treasury of the national government and to the balance of trade of the country.

THE MAXIMUM production which can be claimed from the two concessions now worked is limited by their ability to pipe oil out. The pipelines for the De Mares and Barco concessions have a maximum carrying capacity of 57,000 and 25,000 barrels a day respectively, making a total possible output of 87,000 barrels. These pipelines are being used to the extent of 65,000 barrels. The remaining 17,000 barrels daily could be shipped only providing the fields could produce that much more, and that sufficient tankers were available at the export terminals.

In order to maintain a given flow of oil, drilling must be continued in a corresponding degree. The De Mares and Barco concessions have been drilled up almost completely, so the only way for Colombia to stimulate production within the near future would be to discover and develop a new field near the pipeline. Even so, experience has shown that it will be six to ten years before the petroleum would reach the world market.

Venezuela is Colombia's foremost competitor in attracting oil capital. During 1941, Venezuela increased its production, according to world petroleum figures, 20.64 per cent, representing an additional yield of 38,141,000 barrels, or 1.7 times the total production of Colombia. This occurred while Colombia was experiencing a 4.50 per cent drop in its oil production over 1940. Two conditions seem to have been responsible for this: (1) more favorable and enlightened social, labor, and tax laws in Venezuela; and (2) actual "wildcat" results — satisfactory results from drilling on unproven ground.

REPEATED SUCCESS has been reported from the "wildcat" program in eastern Venezuela, which from a geological point of view is an area comparable to the eastern Llanos of Colombia. Similar exploratory work cannot be carried out in Colombia because legislation makes private oil land unavailable to "wildcatting." Forty-seven per cent of the total prospective oil land under lease or owned in fee, representing private oil land, is thus excluded from such preliminary work, and has as yet no wells. The other 53 per cent of prospective oil land is open to development, and on it 1306 wells have been drilled.

Tax legislation and development conditions are also severe. Besides royalty payments—10 per cent of the value of the production at the field, oil companies pay all the taxes paid by other industries in the country. These include an income tax, excess profits tax, customs duties, tonnage fees, internal revenue stamps, and a capital assets levy. The latter tax is particularly deterring. Under it, companies which have equal incomes pay equal income taxes, but the company which has invested most in equipment pays a heavier capital assets levy. This means that when a company increases drilling in order to maintain production, it is subject to higher and higher taxes. Of the leading export industries of the country, petroleum alone has been singled out to pay this tax; coffee, gold, platinum, and banana producers being exempt.

During the exploratory period, an oil company must invest a minimum of four to eight million dollars, and during the development period another million dollars. At the end of the exploitation period, oil property reverts to the government. This includes immovable property, and the government has the privilege of purchasing all movable property.

The extent to which the government depends on the oil industry has been estimated by E. Ospina Racines, Colombian petroleum expert. According to his figures, 16 per cent of the money received by the National Treasury in 1940 was paid by petroleum producers and exploration companies. This does not include five million pesos paid in consumption taxes, which if counted bring the total contribution to 22.3 per cent of the government revenues. In drawing up the budget for the current year, the government estimated a 10 per cent increase over 1940 in income from oil. This failed completely to take account of the decrease in petroleum production and the difficulties in securing tanker transportation.

Thirty-five per cent of government revenues are derived from customs duties and taxes on imports, which have dropped and continue to drop because of wartime transportation shortages. As economic conditions grow worse, Colombia may be forced by circumstances to pass legislation more favorable to the development of the petroleum industry.

Full Gas Text

Release By Henderson's Office

The text of the release by the Office of Price Administration on gasoline rationing in the East follows:

Acting on information supplied by Harold L. Ickes, Petroleum Coordinator, and at the direction of the War Production Board, Price Administrator Leon Henderson today announced that a temporary plan for rationing gasoline in 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia would be instituted May 15.

This plan, designed to meet the immediate emergency in the Eastern States affected by the recent gasoline limitation order of the Office of Petroleum Coordinator, is an interim plan, which will probably operate only until July 1, when it is planned to institute a more elaborate and comprehensive coupon rationing system. The amount of gasoline that a user may receive under the plan will be announced before May 15.

The States to be rationed gasoline under the interim plan are: Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

The temporary plan, designed to be put into effect quickly, the administrator pointed out, was adopted to assure the public of fair distribution of the curtailed supplies of gasoline under the new limitation order, which reduces deliveries to gasoline retailers by 33 1-3 per cent.

"The petroleum shortage in the East arises, not from a scarcity of crude or from refinery facilities, but from a lack of transportation means," Mr. Henderson said. "Normally more than 90 per cent of the 1,500,000 barrels of petroleum products we consume daily in the East is brought in by tanker. Since the start of the war many tankers have been sunk by enemy submarine action, and sinkings continue. At the same time the Army and Navy, preparing for offensive action at the earliest possible moment, need every tanker that can be pressed into military service.

"There is also an ever growing demand for petroleum products on the home front, and every gallon that comes in to any area must be wisely used. Industries, thousands of which are located in the Eastern States, must have oil, or their production of war materials will stop. Gasoline must be used to get workers employed in those factories to work, or war production again will be hampered. Then there are many other types of gasoline users—the doctor, the nurse, the commercial driver—who need gasoline to carry on activities regarded as essential to civilian efficiency under war economy.

"Naturally, when there is not enough of a commodity to go around, curtailments have to be imposed. Already the Office of Petroleum Coordinator has arranged through the War Production Board for a drastic curtailment on gasoline deliveries to dealers along the Atlantic Coast. This curtailment is now so severe that supplying passenger cars on a first-come first-served basis is obviously inadequate. While the limitation order protects our gasoline supply, it does not protect the essential user from the car owner who wants to drive for pleasure and has money to buy all the gasoline he can get.

"By issuing ration cards to all passenger car owners, we can provide a means for sharing fairly, whatever supply of gasoline is made available in the 17 States affected. We will also have means of keeping excessive amounts of gasoline from the non-essential user, and of saving it for the man who needs it for war work.

"Every day's delay in instituting a rationing plan spells injustice for the consumer, as well as inefficiency for our war effort. That is why an interim plan, one that is simple and can be put into effect within three weeks, is imperative."

Registration days for obtaining gasoline rationing cards will be May 12, 13 and 14. The registration sites and hours for registering will be announced later. However, it was emphasized, the same local rationing boards that administer the rationing of tires, automobiles and sugar will again be called upon to serve as rationing bodies in their respective communities. After the registration dates the local boards will hear appeals, receive applications for adjustments, and conduct other business in connection with the gasoline rationing program.

Drivers of all noncommercial passenger cars will need their cards to purchase gasoline beginning May 15, the day after registration closes.

Operators of all trucks and other motor vehicles that are readily recognized as commercial vehicles will not need cards for gasoline purchases. Under the interim plan they are not restricted, and may get gasoline as they formerly did.

All other operators, including commercial users whose vehicles are not clearly marked as commercial, will need one of five types of cards to be issued upon application.

The basic "A" card will be issued to any passenger automobile owner upon presentation of his car registration card. The owner of two or more automobiles may receive an "A" rationing card for each vehicle in his possession.

Emphasizing the simplicity of the interim plan, Joel Dean, chief of the Fuel Ration Branch of the Office of Price Administration, said automobile owners will not be asked to fill out formal registration blanks to get "A" ration cards.

"When a car owner presents his registration card at an elementary school on one of the registration days," Dean explained, "the registrar will immediately write the license number on the card, and stamp it as well as the registration certificate so that it cannot be presented at another time for another ration card. The car owner will thereupon be handed his 'A' card."

The "A" card, which will resemble a meal or commutation ticket, will contain seven squares, each representing a unit of gasoline which the holder will be entitled to purchase any time between May 15 and July 1. The number of gallons in each "unit" will be announced shortly before May 15, and may be varied later to meet the supply situation. Service station attendants will tear off, mark, or punch a square for each unit of gasoline delivered to the card holder.

It will be possible, Mr. Dean pointed out, for the automobile owner to buy as many units as desired at one time. However, any motorist who uses all of his units before July 1 will not be permitted to get another card and he may, as a result, have to lay up his car.

Doctors, war workers and others whose vocations require mileage greater than that provided by the basic allowance may apply for supplemental cards. Cards "B-1," "B-2," and "B-3" will be issued to passenger car owners who state in an application that their gasoline needs fall within certain specified mileage limits.

"The "B-1" cards will contain 11 "unit" squares; the "B2" card will have 15 squares; and the "B-3" card, 19. As in the case of the "A" card, the amount of gasoline each "unit" will represent has not been determined. An "A" unit, may also differ from a "B" unit.

In addition to the "A" and "B" cards there will be an "X" card to be issued to car owners whose gasoline needs cannot be estimated in a definite number of miles. A doctor, for example might qualify for an "X" card.

Forms for making applications for "B" and "X" cards will be supplied at the time of registration, and may be filled out at the registration site. Rationing cards will be issued at that time to those who qualify.

Any registrant who feels he is suffering especial hardship because of the particular rationing card issued him may appeal later to the local rationing board. He will be issued supplemental rations if he can show need.

Owners of motorcycles will receive a smaller number of gallons for each unit on their ration cards, Mr. Dean said. This is due to the fact that motorcycles use only a fraction of the amount of gasoline to cover the same mileage that even small cars do. Small motor cars, however, will get the same gallonage as larger cars.

Inboard motor boats not used commercially will get 'A" cards. They will be required to show additional vocational requirements to obtain any supplemental gasoline allowances. A normal supply of gasoline will be allowed for other nonhighway uses, including outboard motor boats, farm tractors, gasoline engines, stoves and furnaces, cleaning establishments, etc. Owners, however, will be required to sign a declaration that the gasoline will be used for nonhighway purposes.

Car owners moving from the unrationed to the rationed area will be given ration cards at the local rationing board office nearest to the border upon presentation of their registration certificate.

Eve Curie, Ending World Trip, Asks Greater Effort By Allies

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, April 22.—Eve Curie, returning from a five-months trip that took her to the principal battle fronts of the world, said today the United Nations must work 24 hours a day and must work for closer coordination with one another.

"The coordination between the Allies is rather loose," Mlle. Curie said. "People are fighting for the same cause, but they are far from each other, both geographically and in other ways. We must each work 100 per cent, and try for closer coordination with one another. That must be stressed, particularly in time of reverses."

Mlle. Curie left the United States last November 10 to journey around the world and report what she saw. The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7 prevented her reaching a number of her destinations. Manila was out of the question, and Singapore had fallen by the time she reached the Far East, but in her five-months trip she interviewed the principal Allied leaders in the Orient.

She first went to Cairo and was the first woman to visit the desert battlefield in Libya. From there she went to Syria and thence to the Soviet Union. In Russia, Mlle. Curie made four trips to the front. Although she walked on battlefields strewn with corpses in Russia, was with the British forces in Africa and visited Rangoon just as the Japanese turned their attack on Burma, she never came under fire, even from bombing attacks.

"On the Russian front I was with the Russian artillery, but the Germans were still miles away," Mlle. Curie said. "Few journalists are permitted near enough the front lines actually to come under fire."

Rubberless Auto Tires?

Things to Come?

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, April 22.—Rubberless automobile tires? It sounds almost as fantastic as the automobile engine that was supposed to operate on air alone, but apparently one of the surest things to come out of the war emergency is an automobile tire that requires little or no rubber.

Whether it will be of quality good enough to carry on in the postwar period isn't being speculated upon by the rubber industry heads right now, but most of them are convinced a usable substitute can be produced for the tire that uses an average of around 10 pounds of crude rubber.

Just a little more than 100 years ago an almost discouraged researcher dropped a little crude latex and sulphur upon a hot kitchen stove and stumbled upon the secret of vulcanizing rubber. The process thus discovered by Charles Goodyear made possible the development of the great automobile industry, although a nation of automobile-minded people was not then part of his vision of the future.

TODAY ENGINEERS with elaborate equipment, inventors in "basement laboratories" and "just plain individuals" with virtually no experimental facilities are struggling with problems whose solution may be vital to the continued rolling of millions of motor cars during and immediately after the war. They are the researchers who are trying to make automobile tires without cutting into the Nation's limited supply of rubber.

Scores of chemists and others are carrying on the experiments. They are using just about every known substance that has any of the properties of rubber in coagulation, resiliency and wear-resistance. Some are working with materials that have no direct or indirect relation to natural or synthetic rubber.

The processes, of course, are secret. In the case of the Ford Motor Co. and the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. the experiments have advanced far enough so that it may be said road tests are under way. Goodyear disclosed that no rubber of any kind—crude, synthetic or reclaimed—was being used; Ford's tire uses less than one pound of rubber to a casing.

In each case the motorist has been cautioned not to expect too much too soon. Moreover, the source of the tube that must go with each casing is yet to be determined. The average tube requires about 1¼ pounds of rubber; the progress disclosures thus far have dealt entirely with casings.

INQUIRIES RESPECTING experimental work in various quarters usually elicit the not very enlightening information that "we are using a 'specially treated' fabric, impregnating it with our secret formula."

Even the experimental product that uses ordinary brake lining material as its basic substance also requires that "specially treated" fabric, but it does boast the virtue of presenting a really tough surface to the highway. One engineering genius who has contributed much to the progress of the automotive industry in the last quarter century, told intimates recently of his own experiments with what he termed a "pliable plastic."

Pointing out that his tires would be strictly of the emergency type, he explained that they would need a special coating of a secret substance for each day's driving. This would be applied with a painter's spray gun in the owner's garage. Driving, of course, would be limited to pavement.

This is one of the extremes of the research that is going forward. It illustrates, however, the intensity with which American engineering skill is applying itself to the automobile tire replacement problem.

Chinese Diplomat Will Discuss War

Mount Vernon Seminary today will hold the second in a series of lectures on the Allied effort. Tsweng-ling Tsui, first secretary of the Chinese Embassy, will speak on "The Role of China in the War."

The lectures are given for the sake of a better understanding of the common effort of the United Nations. The first speaker, Capt. H. Cotton Minchin of the British Embassy, had for his subject "The Dignity and Responsibility of the Ally." India and Russia will be represented later.

Admission is by invitation. Students, day students and their parents as well as friends of the school and those interested in learning more of the seminary will attend.

Unions May Sue For Libel

THE SO-CALLED labor press of the country, consisting of many small and generally scurrilous publications, most of them conducted for the financial and political profit of the union bosses, has greeted with jubilation a decision by the New York Court of Appeals that unions may sue for libel. Up to now, however, I have seen no similar rejoicing in any of these sheets over another decision, by a State court in California, that unions and obviously their publications may in turn be sued for libel by those whom they delight to defame. I venture to believe that this one will be stoutly resented as another low blow at labor's rights.

The New York decision was no surprise to me because I had always assumed that a union had personality, so to speak, and could punish and obtain redress from anyone who slandered its fair name. That is why I have always been very careful to stay within the bounds of provable fact in my discussion of unions and those vicious personalities engaged in the union racket who exploit, persecute and rob the common American worker with the connivance of the National Government.

I WEIGHED my facts well before I declared that the American Federation of Labor had among the roster of union officials in its component groups the nucleus of a first class rogues' gallery and that it had become a front for thieves and underworld gangsters. For I was ready to prove that such crooks as Umbrella Mike Boyle of the Chicago electricians, Browne, Bioff and Scalise and the degenerate Brother Jones of Akron, Ohio, among many others, were members of the official family and powers in the organization; that Brother Will Green had publicly and officially defended Browne after his character had become notorious throughout the country and that he had vouched for Brother Scalise, a Capone gangster of the most obvious sort, knowing that Brother Scalise had done time for seducing and exploiting a young girl as her bargaining agent.

I have always held that responsibility accompanies the privilege of a free press and just naturally assumed that anyone who bore false witness against a union must be liable to punishment. Similarly, I entertained a conviction or superstition that a union or its official publication should be held responsible for false and defamatory representations against innocent individuals but realized that, because the right to sue was never invoked, there must be some artificial verboten. In the California case an indignant businessman brought suit against a local union for falsely declaring that his place of business was unfair to labor and recovered $100, a nominal but significant victory. Still, I would not be confident that this decision would be sustained in the United States Supreme Court for I have just refreshed my memory on the famous Frankfurter decision in the so-called Carpenters' Case and find no encouragement for victims of wanton injury at the hands of liars on the union side.

In that case, as Justice Frankfurter blandly conceded, the carpenters and machinists both reached an agreement with Anheuser-Busch of St. Louis over the division of certain jobs among their respective memberships, promising to submit all disputes to arbitration. The carpenters, however, repudiated their treaty after the manner of aggressor nations, and when Anheuser-Busch, in turn, refused to repudiate its agreement with the machinists, the carpenters not only struck but, by circulars and through their official journal, started an injurious boycott on the false representation that the company was unfair.

ACCORDING to Justice Frankfurter's own statement of the case, it was the carpenters' union which plainly was unfair and the company is plainly acquitted of unfairness. Nevertheless Justice Frankfurter held that "the picketing of Anheuser-Busch with signs to indicate that Anheuser-Busch was unfair to organized labor" was "a familiar practice in these situations" and that "the facts here charged constitute lawful conduct under the Clayton Act." In other, but not substantially different words, the highest court in the United States here pointedly refrains from condemning an injurious slander of an innocent victim by a union and holds that, in the Clayton Act, at least, the United States Congress consciously intended to place in the hands of unions the weapon of defamation with which to beat into submission persons with whom they have already, and admittedly, broken faith.

Unions and their publications are incomparably more guilty of vicious slanders and libel than their critics, while those who criticize unions generally may be said to err, when they do, only from lack of skill and caution in the presentation of facts. It is the general public, candidates for political office and honest critics of criminality in unions who suffer by far the most from false witness in this equation but it is the purveyors of this abuse who claim protection and disclaim legal responsibility.

Possibly your Congressman and Senators would like to correct Mr. Frankfurter's impression that it ever was the intention of Congress to legalize defamation of whomsoever by a special group.

Murder And Rape Accompany Jap Troops In Hongkong

(Henry Bough, a member of the Reuters staff formerly in Hongkong, escaped to free China from the one-time British crown colony after three months in the Japanese-occupied city. He wrote the following dispatch for Reuters and the Associated Press.)

By Henry Bough

Chungking, April 22.—A Japanese-made hell—that was Hongkong three months after its occupation.

Starvation faces a large proportion of the population. When the Japanese seized the island it was estimated there was a nine-months supply of food on hand. But large quantities were commandeered by the Japanese army and shipped away.

Food supplied the prisoners of war is poor and scarce, and there is much sickness. Civilian internees are somewhat better off, for they occasionally get fish and meat. The prisoners of war are given only rice and beans.

I can confirm the appalling stories of murder and rape which have been reported. Many of the worst atrocities were committed in the presence of Japanese officers. They are only too true. Many of the women, after being attacked, were shot.

In the early days of the occupation the Japanese troops engaged in widespread looting. Men and women were stopped in the streets and watches and money were taken from them. Under the pretext of searching for arms, Japanese troops under the command of officers entered and ransacked private premises.

Everything possible is done to lower western prestige. Britons are ordered to sweep the streets while others must carry away dead bodies. British subjects are struck in the face on the slightest provocation.

All of these incidents took place before British and allied subjects were interned. One day notices appeared ordering all "enemy" nationals to report the following morning.

They were given a few hours to settle their private affairs and were allowed to take with them only their clothing and personal belongings. The internees first were concentrated in several third rate Chinese boarding houses.

After about two weeks all were removed to a large prison at Stanley, about 4 miles across from Victoria on Hongkong Island. No visitors were allowed there. The plight of elderly people perhaps was worst of all.

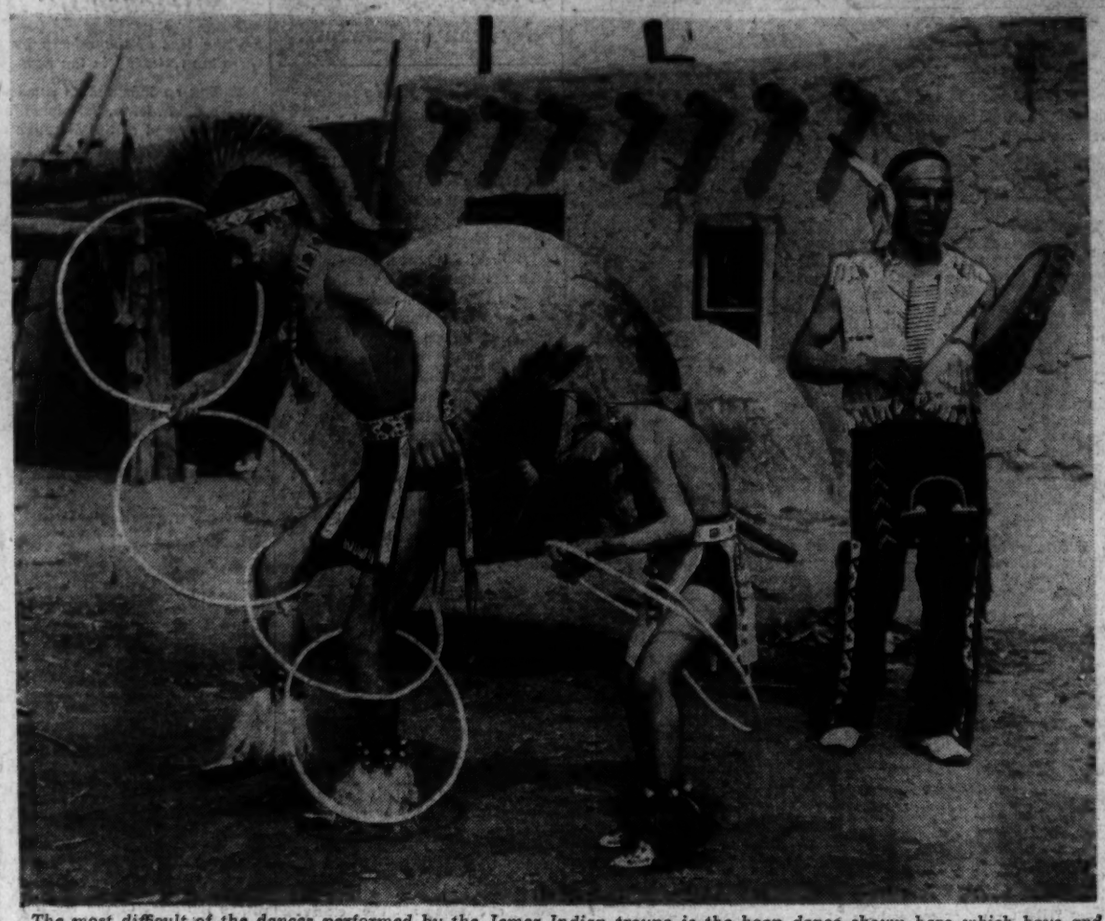
White Cloud's Brothers on Dance Trail



The most difficult of the dances performed by the Jemez Indian troupe is the hoop dance shown here which boys and young men use to show their agility and endurance

TONY WHITE CLOUD'S Brothers—a group of champion dancers from the Jemez Indian pueblo near Sante Fe, N. Mex., will make their first appearance in a festival in Washington, Wednesday afternoon, May 6, when they will present some of their famous dances at the opening program of the Ninth Annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall, sponsored by the Washington Post Folk Festival Association. They also will appear on the Wednesday night program and both Thursday programs.

This group is sponsored by the Santa Fe Railway and approved by the war savings staff of the United States Treasury Department for they are doing their bit in a tour of principal cities of the country selling Government bonds and accepting no remuneration for their programs.

There will be seven adult members of the Jemez (pronounced Hay-mes, with the accent on the Hay) tribe and one 7-year-old boy—little Sammy Bright Star, who is especially noted for his skill in the hoop dance, which he will dance solo for both the matinee programs for the school children and with one of the grown-up dancers, in the evenings.

THE NAMES of the adults in the group are—Tony White Cloud, leader; Val Cloud Hill, Clement Young Eagle, Josephine Cloud Blossom, Juanita Blue Water, Laurence Eagle Tail, and Philip Thunder Bird.

The leader, Tony White Cloud, is gentle, courteous, educated and tells a little of the history of the Jemez people. He says that, once a year they elect a governor and other officers.

"The dates of our elections are kept secret," says Tony. "Nobody knows just when meetings will be called. We have two parties—just as you have Democrats and Republicans. By keeping our elections secret, we prevent a lot of preelection fighting."

This seems most amusing coming from the once ferocious Indians and quite in contrast to our big party conventions with their noisy rumpuses. The Indian women do not vote at the Jemez meetings.

All the men of the tribe, though they do not have the privilege of national voting (any more than citizens of the National Capital) still are registered for the draft.

"MOST of our income at the pueblo is from farming and pottery," says Tony White Cloud. "We have strict rules and laws which we make ourselves. Violators are punished by their own court."

All the Jemez are Pueblos (from the Spanish word applied to them and other tribes who have created a village—also called pueblo—and live in it constantly—rather than roam as do the Plains Tribes). The Jemez pueblo is on the Jamez River, 65 miles west of Santa Fe with an altitude of 5800 feet. The oldest part is built around the dance plaza, a bare square in the center were ceremonial dances are held. This old part is two-storied and terraced. The rest of the village is spread north and south along the valley between high mesas in single-storied adobe homes of one to three rooms.

At present there are 738 Jemez Indians. In 1630 there were 3000; in 1680, 5000. In 1838 the Pecos Indians abandoned their pueblo and 17 survivors came to live with their kinsmen, the Jemez. Today they claim that more than 200 Jemez's present population are descendants from Pecos mothers. There are Catholic and Presbyterian Missions and a modern grade school built by the United States Government. Also a "kiva" — sacred meeting-place of the two clans in each village. The women of this tribe all bake in round, out-door ovens. The language is a form of "Towa." They also speak Spanish and English. They are farmers primarily and farm as primitively as they did in the days of Coronado. They also make fine pottery, basketry and are skilled weavers. Miss Margaret L. Irwin, Indian scholar, accompanies the dance group on tour.

The eagle dance is one of the most beautiful and graceful of all the colorful dances presented by the Jemez Indian troupe

Self-Supporting Woman Who Regards Her Graying Hair as Threat to Job Security Cannot Decide Whether to Tint Locks or Grow Hoary and Dignified

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a business woman in my late thirties and my hair is beginning to turn very gray; of which fact I am very sensitive. I cannot decide whether or not to have it colored—beginning now, before it becomes too noticeable. I am told it is expensive and takes time; but I could manage that, if I thought the investment worthwhile.

I believe men in business are inclined to think that a woman with gray hair is getting old and has outlived her usefulness. And since I am alone in the world and have to earn my own living, I don't want to be "put on the shelf," before my time. One hears on all sides, nowadays, that women must look their best, to bolster morale. And yet, on the other hand, we are told not to spend too much time and money on beautification, when there is important war work to be done and defense stamps to be bought. "Simplify the beauty program," seems to be the slogan.

So I am between the devil and the deep blue sea, as the saying goes. The first thing I notice about a woman any more is her hair. I am doubtless adding more gray hairs to my head by worrying over the situation. Women who dye their hair have always impressed me as lacking the courage to face facts about themselves. But now that my hair is turning gray, I am strongly tempted to follow their example. In case I decide to let nature take its course, is there a certain line of conduct befitting one with a hoary head—such as added dignity, quietness of manner, and the selection of more mature clothes? And how could I forget the gray in my hair and be self confident in spite of it? Your advice will be much appreciated. Sincerely, JOYCE.

Attitude Toward Self Shapes Others' Reaction

DEAR JOYCE: In my opinion, the question of whether or not one should dye one's hair should be decided strictly on the basis of personal esthetic choice. Which is to say, in accordance with one's own idea of artistic or pictorial effectiveness. Actually, I don't think dyed hair ever makes a woman look younger, physically, than she would look with gray or snowy white hair. On the contrary, artificially colored hair tends to be "trying" to the countenance it frames, picking up and accentuating any coarsening of skin, flabbiness of contour or settled expression lines, such as ordinarily accrue with the passing of years. Gray or white hair, on the other hand, if beautifully cared for and smartly coiffed, subtly "flatters" the older face—by giving a misty-soft effect to the whole, which, in turn, can be dramatically (or "glamorously") highlighted again, by clever make-up of eyes and mouth.

However, although dyed hair does not "fool" the discerning eye, which ... ans that a woman of 40 cannot "pass" for 30 imply by richly coloring her graying loc'ks—still, tinted tresses may contribute a "youthifying" accent to an older woman's appearance and personality. Even when the effect is candidly artificial, it may strike a keynote of vital ebullience; give a suggestion of youthful elan. But only, I think, when the woman feels quite genuinely young in heart, and is keenly interested and tirelessly active in the younger generation's traditional pursuits—of enjoying love and laughter and play; and work and dreams and plans for the future. Such a woman might dye her locks, after the silver began to show; simply because she personally disliked the fading color, which seemed to her a stupid contradiction of her essential attitude toward, and fitness for, life.

Now that you are confronting with dismay your first gray hairs, you are by no means restricted, as you seem to think, to a choice between (a) "trying to look young," by resorting to dyes; and (b) sinking with heartsick resignation into the role of "dignified maturity," while nature runs its course. Supposing, despite those gray hairs, you still felt young and ardent and adventurous and desirable, and were to "dress to that feeling"—the color of your hair would scarcely be noted by anyone; unless you should deliberately deck yourself out in certain shades designed to highlight the silver strands and give you an air of distingue chic. (Incidentally, Mrs. Harrison Williams, most frequently cited of the world's "best dressed women," does just that, on occasion.)

My advice is to please yourself about dyeing your hair. If you are bereft of social poise and emotional equilibrium every time you realize that your silver sheen may be showing through, by all means have a fling with the dye pots. But if, on the other hand, you decide it would be more in keeping with your personality-type to "tough it out" with Old Dame Nature—letting her whiten your locks as she will, while the world looks on—then, for heaven's sake, don't consider it your duty, or a fitting gesture, to behave and dress as your grandmother did at the age of 40.

Compensate for the gray in your hair by acquiring a beauty of figure, posture and complexion that will make you outstanding—for line grace, buoyancy and freshness—in any crowd. This you can do through systematic exercise and diet, and through intelligent study of the cosmetic art. Don't strive for "added dignity or quietness of manner." Concentrate primarily on being gay, good humored, open minded, cooperative and optimistic. And dress for the smartest possible feminine effect—an effect that usually is best obtained, for a woman your age, by fine fabrics fashioned along lines that subtly combine the qualities of simplicity and sophistication. Flatter Figure With Right Suit

With shopping time at a premium this spring, fashions related in color are a boon to women. The classic suit (above) of cooling Celanese rayon comes in a restful shade called day-dream blue. Crisp accessories are of queen's navee and gob hat white. Although patch pocket suits are best for tall girls, this one is neatly tailored without bulk and would look well on anyone but a very short girl

Suit Trend Continues; Choose Model to Fit Figure Type

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

THE SUIT vogue which started early last fall is carrying right through spring and into summer. Suits will be especially important this summer as practical "finds" for the woman, who never knows what she may be doing from day to day, morning to evening. Even the woman who lives by a well regulated routine will go into suits—cool rayons, cotton poplins, chambrays and ginghams—because they are easy to wear and simple to take care of.

With so many varieties of suits available in the stores, there should be one to fit every figure. This summer there will be no reason for any one to say, "I certainly wish I could wear suits, but I'm just not the type." As a matter of fact many a suit will do a neat job of camouflaging.

Top-Heavy Type

As for example, if you are a bit top-heavy, select a soft suit with a low cut neckline to minimize the bust; a flared jacket, to make the hips look smaller; and pleats to slenderize. For short necks, a collarless blouse or plain neckline is becoming. All excess thickness of fabrics over the bust should also be avoided.

The woman with hips can wear summer suits too, provided she compensates by filling out in the right places. Shoulders should be slightly padded, not extended but sturdy looking. Many a suit jacket is removed, so make the underneath blouse well fitting at the shoulders too. Wide, deep lapels and top details, or bold color above. Since the narrow skirt is becoming, pleats, rather than flares are advisable.

For the Small Woman

Even the small woman can wear a suit if she is careful to carry out a single color scheme. Jackets should be short, single breasted and buttoned all the way up. Avoid full skirts or width at any point. Stripes, as usual are advised, and smooth fabrics as gabardines and coverts in summer weights are suitable.

Tall girls can get by with virtually any style of suit except those that have close fitting, single breasted jackets. Double breasted jackets, nubby woven or bulky fabrics are becoming. Ginghams, chambrays and bold plaids are also wearable. Patch pockets (and they are still good for summer) on short jackets, as well as full skirts have a shortening effect.

Plastic Reflectors Prevent Accidents In Blackouts

To prevent stumbling in blackouts, or in dimly-lighted areas at normal times, new plastic discs have been designed as danger signs and directional guides. Molded from "lucite" methyl methacrylate, duPont's crystal clear plastic, the penny-size discs are said to give "maximum reflection of light from minimum candle power."

A relief pattern of tiny circles on the underside of the plastic acts as a minute controller and reflector, shooting back light from a "blackout" flashlight or shaded bulb and causing the disc to glow as if illuminated from behind.

Accidents may be avoided by fastening the button-like discs to the risers of cellar stairs, projecting beams of low ceilings and door frames of rooms. Each button has a center hole for inserting nails, screws, rivets or wires. Tacks are included with sets of four discs. Available in crystal, amber, red or green, the little reflectors are practically unbreakable and very light in weight.

As markers along dark driveways, discs fastened to tree trunks or wired to projecting rocks will guide the night-time motorist safely to his own doorway. The reflectors are designed also for use on bicycles and to be worn on the arm by pedestrians. Constant exposure to the weather will not harm the plastic.

Slacks Taboo If the Wearer Is Overweight

By Ida Jean Kain

ANY WOMAN who wears high heels with her slacks should be fined or imprisoned or both, according to a leading fashion magazine. Not that the editors mind if you trip on your trouser cuff and break your neck! It's just for appearance's sake.

Since the subject has taken on national dimensions, why not go a bit further and have a law against fat ladies wearing slacks? A girl like Marlene Dietrich looks wonderful in them. But a sight I hope never to see is Elsa Maxwell in slacks.

Slacks Taboo

The police inspectors who are always telling women the limit of brevity for bathing suits, shorts and the like ought to have their authority extended to weight. If a woman is more than 12 pounds overweight, she shouldn't be allowed on the streets in slacks.

And right along this same line, the woman with a hipline of more than 39 inches shouldn't even think of wearing them. For the short stocky woman under 5 feet 4 the hipline should measure much less than that. You can see why.

But in spite of a rumor that slacks take too much material—the Washington authorities declare it takes fully two more yards of material for a slacks suit than for a skirt and coat—it looks as though they will be more popular than ever this season. So it is up to you to get into trim—or else stick to skirts. Besides bringing your weight down within reason, you will need exercises to tone the hip muscles and slim you down. Here is a trio you can count on:

Slimming Trio

1. POSITION: Lie on your back on the floor with knees flexed and feet on floor close to hips. Have arms straight out on floor at sides, shoulder level.

MOVEMENT: Hoist your hips clear of the floor, turn them slightly so that the fat pad on the side is brought into direct range, and come down on it with a thump. Keep hoisting, turning and thumping for 20 counts. Rest, then work away on the other hip.

2. POSITION: Assume a semi-sitting position on the floor, with legs together and straight down, but leaning back on your elbows with weight on forearms.

MOVEMENT: Roll away over on one side, then back across the hips and over on the other side. Keep rolling for 10 counts and rest. Then repeat, but this time have feet off the floor, legs straight, as you roll.

3. POSITION: Lie face downward on the floor, legs straight down.

MOVEMENT: Raise alternate legs from the hips, high up in back. Keep knees straight and strongly tense the fleshy hip muscles as you raise legs. Continue for 20 counts, alternating legs. Rest, then finish by raising trunk and both legs together as [illegible] off floor as possible, five [illegible]. These conditioners will trim you down to a fine form.

Designed for Slacks

Walking More? You'd Better Have Good Shoes

If you're driving less to conserve your tires, and find yourself walking more, comfortable shoes that are well cared for will prove a good investment.

Extra care in buying shoes to insure a good fit will mean that they last longer, advises the Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration. Shoes that are too long have a tendency to crack across the instep and the lining wears out quickly when shoes are too big. Shoes that are too small get out of shape soon. The front of the shoe wears quickly, the instep cracks, and with the weight of the body in the wrong place, the last soon breaks down.

Proper care of shoes is specially important in prolonging their life. Wet shoes are easily pushed out of shape, and there's always a chance that dampness will start mildew and rotting of the leather. So if you get your shoes wet, dry them carefully. Use shoe trees to keep them in shape, or newspaper if you have no shoe trees. Then dry them slowly but completely away from the direct heat of radiators and stoves. Polish them as soon as they are dry. The oils and waxes in a good polish protect the leather.

When shoes are not actually in use, they should be kept in shape with shoe trees. These bring the shoe last back to its original form and keep the toes straight and in shape. But if trees are not available, newspapers stuffed tightly into the toes will help.

And lastly, it is important to keep your shoes in good repair. Have the heels straightened before the last is worn crooked. Replace worn soles as soon as the outer soles wear through. When seams break, have them repaired at once. In these days when we're conserving the Nation's resources for war production, getting a good repairman to keep your shoes in condition will greatly extend the usefulness of each pair.

Why Homestead "FIRST-TIMERS" Become "Regulars"

The first "comfortable inn" built at Virginia Hot Springs in 1766 has long since given way to the luxurious Homestead, but the original spirit of Southern hospitality has been preserved through the passing of 175 years.

It's a spirit you can't fail to notice—and it's one of the reasons why so many "first-timers" become Homestead "regulars," returning year after year to recapture the quiet charm of this 17,000-acre mountain resort.

The Homestead can't be described in a paragraph; but if you will let us know your tastes in recreation, we'll tell you what we have that you might like.

Cottons Develops Fine Prints

Silk, satin, calico, rags—what will milady wear this year? Silk and satin are out (as of December 7), calico is very definitely in—and we hope it won't come to rags!

What it has come to is the development of a gorgeous array of new fabrics which never saw a silkworm, ingenious fabrics born of such unrelated odds and ends as cotton and coal tar, corn husks and glass, fabrics which give us that priceless boon—something new.

But that isn't all that's new. Because many of these novelty cottons, rayons, acetates look best in print, designers have created a host of novel designs—prints you never saw before. Further, dress designers soon realized that prints used as trimming, accessories, in unusual combination with plain fabrics, would do much to replace the conventional trimmings and laces imported before the muddle of the war.

Hollywood designers and Hollywood stars were quick to see the decorative value of all this. Prints, being photogenic, have been popular for screen clothes for years. Further, Hollywood—depending upon imports from France for "creative" fabrics—have been feeling the pinch for at least two years, and so turned, long before Pearl Harbor, to the American synthetic for original designs.

White House Dinner Tonight For Visitors

Despite the White House social blackout, a royal visit is still a royal visit, and tonight the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will lift their wartime entertainment ban to give a small dinner in honor of Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her consort, Prince Bernhard.

The royal party will arrive in the Capital this afternoon and will go directly to the White House, which they will use as their headquarters during their two-day stay. Receiving them in state at Union Station will be the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon, members of the legation staff, and State Department officials. They will then step into executive cars for their trip up Pennsylvania Avenue.

Princess Juliana and her party will come in from New York, where they arrived from Ottawa. The crown princess and her two small daughters, Princess Beatrix and Princess Irene, have made their home in Canada since June, 1940. Arriving with the princess will be her secretary, Wilhelm Vanteps, and Mrs. Vanteps.

Tomorrow evening the Minister and Mme. Loudon will entertain at a dinner in honor of the visitors, and probably several other fetes will be planned for them during their short stay here.

Popular Frank Langstone Leaving Soon for Post At Ottawa; New Australian Envoy Has Brilliant Record

HIS JOB IN Washington almost finished, Frank Langstone will be off some time soon to take over his new duties as the first New Zealand High Commissioner at Ottawa.

Here for ten months as head of the New Zealand supply mission, Mr. Langstone has made a host of friends, most of whom have been taking it hopefully for granted that he would stay around indefinitely.

There were rumors for a time that he was here not only to help find a site for his country's first legation is America, but that he would be Minister himself. From the beginning, Mr. Langstone firmly and consistently denied that report. "I'm here to lay the groundwork," said the small, round gentleman, who fairly bubbles when he talks about his homeland and who still has a string of government departments under his thumb. (He has served as minister of lands, forestry, publicity, natives' affairs and tourists.) "When my job in Washington is done I'll be moving on."

"ARE YOU THERE?" was the way Mr. Langstone greeted me over the telephone the first time I called him with a flock of queries on tap. That was last summer. Yesterday the greeting and the accent were the same. Also, the sense of humor.

"Looks as if your country makes a practice of sending you out as a kind of diplomatic pioneer," I said. "You came here to pick a site for the first New Zealand Legation and to get the legation organized, and now you're headed for Ottawa to start something there."

"Diplomatic pioneer?" he repeated with a chuckle. "Well—" and there was a moment's hesitation. "No, I'd better not say it . . . But my name for what I really am is not quite that. It's a lot worse!" And there was another chuckle.

In a more serious vein, he said his date of departure was not yet decided. "But it probably won't be far from now," he added. His wife is still in New Zealand. Ever since he came over to America, he has been planning for her to join him. But the problem of obtaining passage grows more difficult each day.

Since the beginning of the war, Mr. and Mrs. Langstone have seen four sons leave for the war. One, who was with the New Zealand forces engaged in the Mediterranean area, has not been heard from in almost a year. Two others are fighting in the Middle East; another is in the South Pacific area. Two daughters, both married, are in New Zealand.

SPEAKING OF new appointments—the announcement that Sir Owen Dixon would succeed former Australian Minister Richard G. Casey has created wide interest here. Although he has never held a diplomatic post before, Sir Owen has chalked up a brilliant record in the legal field and has successfully negotiated duties as chairman of the New Zealand Central Wool Committee and of the Coastal Shipping Board since the beginning of the war.

A graduate of the University of Melbourne, he became a member of his country's highest court at the age of 42. He is now 55. Whether his wife and children (he has two sons and two daughters) will accompany him to Washington is not yet known, but he is expected to arrive here "in a month or so."

DOWN FROM NEW YORK for a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Royall Hauer had a luncheon party in stitches yesterday as she told one amusing story after another—proving, incidentally, that a witty way of relating almost any incident must run in the family.

She and Mrs. Arnold have the same flair for entertaining a crowd with a string of yarns that nobody else in the world could tell half as cleverly. Best one in Mrs. Hauer's repertoire yesterday had to do with a young pilot who was having his final lesson in parachute jumping . . .

"Now," said the instructor, as the pilot opened the door and prepared to drop to earth, "remember you are to count to ten, and then pull the ripcord. If the parachute doesn't open then, count to ten again, and pull the emergency cord. . . . As soon as you land, get to your feet as soon as possible, and fold your parachute. . . . By that time, a station wagon will have arrived to take you to headquarters."

With a final "goodby and good luck!" the instructor slapped the pilot on the back. The young man jumped from the plane and plunged through space. He counted to seven, then nervously pulled the ripcord. Nothing happened, except that he dropped through another cloud and got more nervous. He counted to seven again—and pulled the emergency cord. The parachute still failed to open. "Darnit," he said as he plunged through another cloud bank, "I'll bet that station wagon won't be there either!"

Today she plans to attend the luncheon of the Seventy-third Club at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Yesterday Mrs. Robinson had luncheon with her at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Charles Maddox, Mrs. Hal M. Allen and Mrs. Eugene Villaret.

'Chinese Money' Feature of Fete For Chinese Relief

Mrs. Irene Caldwell, chairman of the hotels committee of the United China Relief drive, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon at her home in Wesley Heights.

A gay and colorful note was added by the Chinese costumes of many of the guests, including Mme. Chu, wife of Gen. Chu Shih-Ming. Chinese Military Attache; Mrs. Lee Foo and her twin daughters, Mme. Lu, Mme. Yu, who is the wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy; Mme. K. S. Wang, wife of the attache of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Choy Wy, Mrs. Deson Sze, daughter-in-law of former Ambassador Sao Ke Alfred Sze; Mrs. J. Y. Yee, Mme. Daniel Lieu, Mme. Kam Li, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Embassy; Mrs. David Loo, Mrs. T. S. Shih, Mrs. T. M. Liang, Mrs. J. Z. Huang, Mrs. W. H. Tam, and Mrs. K. Y. Tsai.

Among the other guests were Mrs. W. D. Whittimore, Mrs. Everett Eynon, Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, Mrs. Junior Owens, Mrs. Harold Hofich, Mrs. Walter Clifford Burke, Miss Rose Erdman, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Elizabeth Webb, Mrs. Bruce Smith and Mrs. Robert Sherrod.

Betty Lee Thompson Is Betrothed To Midshipman

Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Thompson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Lee Thompson, to Midshipman James T. Traylor, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Traylor, of Harlingen, Tex. The wedding will take place June 20 at the Eldbrooke Methodist Church.

Miss Thompson is a student at Fairmont Junior College and her fiance will be graduated from Annapolis in June.

Helen Patricia Colman To Be Wed on May 21

Miss Helen Patricia Colman has decided that hers will be a May-time wedding and has chosen May 21 as the day she will become the bride of Ensign Robert E. Mottern, U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mottern of Arlington.

The details of the wedding are still in the planning stage and she has not selected her attendants definitely as yet, but the ceremony will take place at the Arlington Presbyterian Church. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy B. Colman of Arlington.

Pair of Fetes Planned This Week For Miss Pettus

Two parties, one for the bride-to-be, Miss Marjorie Jean Pettus, and one for her wedding party, will be given before this week is over. Miss Pettus will become the bride of Harold Andrew Dillard May 2 at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

First of the fetes will be a kitchen shower for the bride-elect tonight at which two of her bridesmaids, Miss Charlotte Davis and Miss Drusilla Gottshall, will share the role of hostess. The party will be held at Miss Davis' home in Chevy Chase.

On Saturday night Miss Adele Ritchie, another bridesmaid, will entertain for the bridal party at her apartment on Sixteenth Street.

Peggy Gibbins To Be Feted

Miss Margaret Gibbins, who will be married Saturday afternoon to Noel Bride, will be the guest of honor tomorrow at a cocktail fete given by Mrs. William Bride, sr., mother of her fiance. The hours set for the party are from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Meanwhile, Mr. Bride is at Camp Lee, where the very morning of the wedding he will be graduated from Officers' Training School as a lieutenant. The graduation exercises are scheduled for about noon and the hour for the wedding is 5 o'clock, so the margin of time between the two intervening could not be termed a generous one for covering the intervening distance.

Miss Gibbins is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Gibbins and the late Gen. Gibbins. The wedding will take place at St. Matthew's Cathedral and will be followed by a very small reception for just the bridal party and two families.

Even Now Poles Making Postwar Plans, Envoy Tells A. A. U. W.

STILL ostensibly under the military heel of Nazi Germany, Poland already is making plans for a democratic postwar Europe, asserted the Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, last night. He was guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women.

JAN CIECHANOWSKI

"The Polish and Czecho-Slovak governments, in close understanding with their nations," said the envoy, "are now actively preparing the way to the establishment of permanent European peace after the war. Their contribution in this direction is taking the form of setting up a Confederation of Poland with Czecho-Slovakia conceived on broad democratic lines. To this end the two governments signed a joint declaration in 14 points expressing their decision to establish a confederation of the two nations."

In the meantime, the people in Poland continue to resist the German invader. Guerilla warfare has in fact never ceased in Poland since the campaign of 1939. Sabotage is going on behind the German lines in Poland, according to the Ambassador.

"The German military men are not at ease in my country," he said. "They fear the Polish population, because they realize that the people's unfaltering resistance makes it unsafe for them ever to be off their guard."

Convinced that Germany cannot win this war, Mr. Ciechanowski is certain that the Nazis are enemy No. 1 and that the outcome of this war for the other Axis powers depends entirely upon the results that Germany may or may not achieve. "We have good reason to know that Germany is beset by difficulties," he asserted. He said dimeculties of conducting war operations on an enormous and ever-increasing scale, and of keeping up at the same time war production on no less enormous scale are growing for Germany, which is beginning to feel a lack of man power. Lubricants are becoming scarce, and transportation also is another great problem, he added.

One of the most flagrant and dangerous examples of wishful thinking is our painstaking and futile differentiation between Hitlerism and Pan-Germanism. The envoy pointed out the fallacy of this theory. He stated that since 1933, there has been no organized "freedom movement" in Germany which might justify the setting up abroad of any German "free movement" in exile.

"The German people," he maintained, "have disregarded all warnings and through their acts have made themselves fully responsible to Hitler."

Army and Navy League Rummage Sale

PRACTICALLY any piece of clothes, furniture or bric-a-brac that you might buy today or tomorrow at the Woman's Army and Navy League's annual rummage sale will be chock full of history. Proceeds of the sale, which is being held at the former Lotus Lantern Tearoom, 733 Seventeenth Street, goes to the enlisted men's club of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

Privates were astounded to see the officers' wives working so long and hard for the enlisted men. One new private said to Mrs. Thomas M. Robins, chairman of the rummage sale, "Are these women working in this dirty place officers' wives?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Robins. "Over there is an admiral's wife. Here is a colonel's wife whose husband is in Australia. That one—oh, she's a Navy wife whose husband is at sea. The woman with the dirty smudge is the wife of a major general whose son is in Alaska."

As a result, the private pitched in to do more than his share of work in arranging for the rummage sale.

One woman gave up her sugar ration (to contribute to the rummage sale) because her breakfast chokes her when she reads the news from Bataan, according to Mrs. Robins.

The most important thing about the rummage sale, according to an unnamed major general's wife, is the fact that all groups of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, civilians and friends rolled up their sleeves to work wholeheartedly with details of men from Washington's own Provisional Brigade to make the wartime rummage sale a success. Members of the Police Precinct No. 3 dropped in to lend a helping hand.

Mrs. J. C. Magee, wife of the Surgeon General of the Medical Corps, has charge of the books, while Mrs. James B. Haley, a colonel's wife, takes care of homemade candies. Mrs. S. U. Marietta, wife of the brigadier general, presides over the toy section. Four admirals' wives, Mrs. W. B. Woodson, Mrs. H. G. Bowen, Mrs. W H. Blandy and Mrs. Claude Jones, are in charge of flowers and plants, draperies, window dressing, and men's clothes, respectively. Other officers' wives in charge of various items are: Mrs. Franklin Hart, Mrs. W. D. Styler, Mrs. Walter Layman and Mrs. Oliver Reed; also, Miss Pat Harrison of the Jangos.

Episcopal Home To Get Benefits Of Party

For many years the board of managers of the Episcopal Church Home in this city has sponsored a card party each spring, which has always been held at the Hotel Willard—the entire proceeds being for the expense budget of this home, which is the joint responsibility of every parish in the Diocese of Washington.

This season, however, because of the countless war activities, the board of the home, whose president is Mrs. William Channing Johnson, has decided to invite its many friends to attend, instead, a phantom card party, between now and the first of May; and by the purchase of a table or even a seat, or by a generous contribution to the work of the board, to join the committee's privilege of caring for the aged who need comfort and protection.

The committee in charge of the phantom card party, which is headed by Mrs. Finley H. Calvert, announces that a partial list of patronesses for the party include Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevlet, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. Robert Brookings, Mrs. John Burke, Miss Sophie Pierce Casey, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. William Crozier, Mrs. Victor B. Senate Group Backs RFC Aid To Car Dealers

By the Associated Press

The Senate Banking Committee approved yesterday proposed legislation directing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to purchase automobiles and trucks from dealers who hold the vehicles 18 months after the February 1 freezing order and wish to dispose of them.

The RFC would be directed also to provide financial assistance to the dealers during the 18 months they hold the vehicles in storage.

Also the House Banking Committee was informed by Representative Thomas F. Ford (Democrat), of California, that the Office of Price Administration soon would relax restrictions on the sale of new automobiles to the public.

Ford said the new order would become effective April 29 and probably would be announced by OPA within a few days. As he understood it, he said, the order would make new cars available to all persons "directly or indirectly" connected with the war effort under certain conditions. These conditions, he said, would permit an eligible worker having a car of 1939 or prior make with at least 40,000 miles, to purchase a new car.

Would Get List Price

Under the Senate bill dealers wishing to dispose of autos at the expiration of the 18-month period would receive from the RFC the list price, transportation costs and handling charges.

During the 18-month period, which would expire August 1, 1943, the dealers would be authorized to obtain from the RFC loans amounting to 1 per cent monthly on their stocks.

Dealers who wanted to dispose of their stocks during the 18-month holding period and retire from the automobile business would be able to transfer the vehicles to other dealers at the manufacturers' price.

The committee's action came after Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, testified the RFC already had offered financial assistance to the dealers. The RFC, Jones said, had agreed to buy new 1941 and 1942 models from manufacturers and dealers at cost plus 1 per cent monthly for the period the cars have been in storage.

"I don't think the Government should pay the retail price under any circumstance," Jones declared.

Two Fail to Approve

Jones said the RFC plan had been approved by all except two manufacturers. Charles Bishop, counsel for the National Automobile Dealers Association, later identified these two manufacturers as Chrysler and Ford, who, he said, "have more than half of the dealers in the country."

Somewhat similar plans have been submitted by the RFC to manufacturers of tires, trailers and mechanical refrigerators, Jones said. Tire manufacturers would be paid cost price for their stocks, and in cases where tires had been repurchased from dealers, 10 per cent would be added, which would go to the dealers.

Refrigerator and trailer manufacturers would be allowed cost plus 4 per cent.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, remarked that he had understood the Army was considering buying all new cars for military purposes, but Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, said he had checked the report and found that the Army had all the cars needed.

Taft said he believed the retail price proposed in the bill for cars held more than a year was all right, but he had some doubt about the advisability of adding carrying charges to that.

The other services are doing all right, too. In Denver the Coast Guard signed up a Winston Churchill . . . and at Boston the Marines landed a John Paul Jones, jr.

The armed forces are still having title trouble. In Buffalo the Army acquired a private named Major . . . and at Pensacola a man named Commander was made an ensign . .

At Camp Wolters, Tex., a recent member of the potato-peeling squad was both admiral and colonel—both actual titles . . . from Kentucky . . . sorry to let you down . . .

Meanwhile if you have a name that takes a lot of explaining, be assured that things could be a lot worse. A man named Feuhrer in Rochester, N. Y., had to change his name because people kept addressing him as Der . . .

And a Portland, Oreg., man finally resorted to signing his name "Adolph (not Hitler) Goehring (not Goering)."

Oh, (not uncle) Sam! . . .

VICTORY THROUGH AIR POWER

by Major Alexander P. de Seversky

NO AMERICAN who has ears to listen to the radio, or eyes to read a newspaper headline, needs to be told that air power is going to decide this war. Proof of that has been overwhelming in the long, terrible years since the war began.

As these lines are being written, Jap air power has sunk the two big British cruisers, Dorsetshire and Cornwall and the aircraft carrier Hermes in the Bay of Bengal. Three months ago we read the same kind of sickening news about the sinking of the Repulse and the Prince of Wales—from the air. Two weeks before that there was the attack on Pearl Harbor—from the air. Only the qualitative superiority of the RAF to the Luftwaffe saved Britain in 1940. Nazi air power took Norway and Crete despite British naval superiority.

These are only a few of the constantly multiplying evidences that this is primarily a war for the control of the air. True, the old ideas of naval combat crop up here and there. Right now there's vague talk of a great naval battle between the British and Jap fleets, supposed to be shaping up off India. Perhaps it will take place. But it will be decided—as all naval battles today must be decided—by superior air power. A concentration of naval vessels is just a bunch of sitting pigeons for superior air power.

Most of us know this in our bones. And we know, too, that what it's going to take to win this war—complete command of the air ocean of the world—is something right up America's alley. No nation can make better planes. No nation can make as many as we can.

Perhaps the greatest crusader for an entirely new concept of American airpower is Major Alexander P. de Seversky. He is the former head of Seversky Aircraft, now Republic Aviation Corporation. President Roosevelt presented him with the Harmon Trophy, given only to our outstanding airmen, two years ago. He knows planes like the inside of his hand. He has fought them, designed them, broken speed records with them. He always does his own test-piloting. He holds numerous world's speed records. He designed and built the first low-wing basic training plane for the U. S. Army Air Corps and is responsible for the development of American pursuit planes in their present form. For years he has lectured, written and fought for a drastic revision of our concept of military air power.

Now he has written a book about it, called Victory Through Air Power. It is a book that has the urgency of a bugle call. It is probable that it will arouse more discussion and controversy than any book published since the war began.

Victory Through Air Power is a weapon, planned to show how to win the war. It outlines a specific strategy for victory, calling for a unified air force and high command. It shows what Europe's and our own mistakes have been in the handling of air power. It gives a complete plan for taking the offensive in the air.

It is a book crammed with facts. It gives the reasons for our Pacific setbacks. It explains why land-based planes must invariably be superior to the aircraft-carrier type. It shows, with chapter and verse, what is wrong with our present planes and their tie-up with the rest of our armed forces.

Victory Through Air Power isn't only a book to read one's self. It is a book to make others read, to write to one's Congressman about, to crusade for everywhere. Its ideas, put into effect, may save hundreds of thousands of lives and years of war. It gives the program whereby we can win the final battle, by gaining complete superiority in the element that is best suited to our geographic position, our natural resources, and the genius of our people—the air. SIMON AND SCHUSTER · PUBLISHERS

MAJOR ALEXANDER P. DE SEVERSKY was born in Russia in 1894. He was Chief of Pursuit in the Russian Naval Air Force and through his daring military exploits became the leading ace of his native land. When Russia dropped out of the war in 1918 he offered his services to the United States Government and was appointed aeronautical engineer and test pilot for the government. In 1921 he acted in advisory capacity to the late General "Billy" Mitchell during the latter's demonstration of the ability of aircraft to sink battleships. As a result of his work he was appointed consulting engineer to the War Department by the Secretary of War, a great honor for a young man not yet an American citizen. In 1927 he became an American citizen and was commissioned a major in the U. S. Air Corps Specialist Reserve the following year.

Major Seversky designed the world's first fully automatic bombsight. In 1931 he founded the Seversky Aircraft Corporation, now Republic Aviation Corporation, of which he was President and Director for more than seven years. This company has been engaged in building some of America's best pursuit airplanes. He designed and built the fastest amphibian plane in the world, the first low-wing basic training airplane for the U. S. Army Air Corps, and is responsible for the development of American pursuit airplanes in their present form. He also pioneered in high-altitude combat tactics by developing and building the first turbo-supercharged, air-cooled-engined fighter. He has made numerous other contributions to our air defense. His advanced ideas and long-range views in connection with the technical development of aeronautical equipment have been fully substantiated by the events of the present war.

Major Seversky holds numerous world's speed records and in December of 1940 he was presented with the coveted Harmon Trophy by President Roosevelt for his outstanding achievements in the field of aviation.

He has won the devotion and respect of airmen by acting himself as test pilot for all his planes. He is considered one of our greatest experts on the tactics and strategy of aerial warfare. His ability in that respect has been demonstrated by the accuracy of his forecasts in the course of the current war. In particular his public predictions as to the time the war would begin, the ability of Great Britain to resist invasion, the events at Crete, the Russian-German conflict, and, finally, his analysis of the Pacific theater of war have been truly remarkable.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

President's Word Awaited On Federal Raises

The Federal employe will know definitely whether his salary will be raised to offset skyrocketing living costs after the President's message to Congress, on price and wage control. Whatever labor and wage policy the President lays down will be applied to Federal workers. And that's definite. Half a dozen proposals to raise the wages of low-paid Government employes are on deck waiting to be introduced in Congress. When the President speaks, the Congressional team of Ramspeck and Mead can be depended upon to sponsor an Administration bill for the benefit of Federal workers.

The "white-collar" Government worker is the forgotten man of this war. His hours have been lengthened, his work has been increased, the things he must buy have leaped up in price, but his basic salary has remained the same. All this at a time when employes in every other industry have had their salaries raised. Moreover, the President has successfully fought off all attacks on the 40-hour basic work week for industrial workers, but working hours of the Government "white-collar" employe have been extended from 39 to 44, 48, and up to 60 and 70 hours. The "white-collar" employe isn't paid time and a half for overtime as is his brother in industry.

Even the Government itself discriminates in this respect. Navy Yard and Army arsenal workers not only have had their basic salaries boosted but they are paid overtime also. So are the professional, sub-professional, and technical employes of the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. The Government is sending thousands of inspectors, technicians, investigators, auditors and the like to the field to check on war contractors. They must work beside private employes who are paid overtime which the President has fought tooth and nail to protect. The money that pays the worker in war industry comes from the same till that pays the Government worker —the Federal Treasury.

Another Kick

Decentralized employes got another kick in the pants yesterday. This one from Comptroller General Lindsey Warren, who ruled that the Government can't pay for storing household goods of the employes up to 30 days while they get settled. The Government should pay this expense and officials promise every attempt will be made to get it done.

Twenty-five auto and truck mechanics are needed immediately for duty at Beltsville, Md. Salaries, $1680 and $1860, are offered to men who have had at least four years experience. Twenty-one machinists with four years experience on precision work are wanted at the Naval Powder Factory at Indianhead. Make application at 930 F Street Northwest . . . Boys from 16 to 22 can get apprenticeship jobs at the Washington Navy Yard. The jobs pay $4 a day and from 150 to 200 a month will be hired. Applicants must pass mechanical aptitude tests given by the Civil Service Commission . . . Many of the 65 Justice employes who were transferred yesterday to the Alien Property Custodian will be ordered to Chicago. Some of Treasury's Foreign Funds employes also will be sent to Chicago when they are transferred to Alien Property.

D.C. Progress On Housing Is Reported

New Schedule Calls For 600 Permanent Family Living Units In Metropolitan Area

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Prospects of war housing program on three local fronts were pointed to yesterday by National Housing Agency officials.

1. A new schedule calling for the erection with public funds of 6000 permanent family dwelling units for the metropolitan area was announced by Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., who said President Roosevelt had given his approval to this additional program.

Construction, however, must await Congressional appropriation. It was estimated that 50 million dollars probably would be needed to finance the building and accompanying street and utility facilities.

2. A breakdown on work to be undertaken immediately with 50 million dollars to be provided in accordance with the recent Lanham Act amendment was announced by Administrator Blandford.

Dormitories for 15,000

Of the amount, 30 million dollars will go for dormitories to accommodate 15,000 single workers, and for 4000 permanent family dwellings One thousand of the dormitory units will be built for Negro women and 1500 for single men Government workers. The remaining 13,500 will be for the District's "Government girls."

Dormitory rooms, Administrator Blandford said, will be for workers earning less than $18000 annually.

3. Liberalizing amendments to the National Housing Act, to permit greater Government coverage of loans by the Federal Housing Authority, will alleviate the risk carried by private builders and considerably speed up this part of the war housing program, it is believed. Quick passage by Congress is predicted. They were proposed in a bill introduced this week.

Construction of 21,000 homes by private industry is called for by President Roosevelt for this area during 1942. Priority assistance will be recommended for this number to the War Production Board, Administrator Blandford said.

Location of all housing, both public and private, will be governed by location of office buildings housing new Government employes.

Approximately one-third of these will be stationed in the Arlington-Alexandria area in Virginia, NHA said, and one-third in the "old city" in the District—an area roughly south of K Street and west of North and South Capitol streets. One-sixth will be stationed below M Street in the District and the remaining one-sixth roughly divided between the Stadium site in the District and in the "sub-locality in Suitland, Md."

Breaking these locations into unit numbers, NHA said accommodations for approximately 5500 to 6500 workers would be possibly in the East Potomac Park and the Polo Field on the Mall, at the stadium site near the Anacostia, and in the neighborhood of Howard University or the Langston Terrace Housing Project. Further study and conferences on sites will be made before definite announcement, it was said.

In the Virginia sublocality will be accommodations of from 7500 to 8500 workers on sites giving easy access to the new War and Navy Department buildings, office buildings in the Mall section of the District and those under construction at the National Airport.

400 Homes for Negroes

The 4000 publicly built permanent dwellings will be for families with incomes ranging from $1200 to $2200. Approximately 400 of them will be for Negro occupancy.

The NHA amendments increase the authorization for FHA defense housing mortgage insurance from 300 million dollars to 800 million dollars—providing an extra 500 million dollars. FHA officials said yesterday all the 300 million dollars has been spent or allocated since April 1, but that applications have been accumulating.

Falling off in the number of applications over the Nation last week was seen as due to the lack of money then available, and it is expected to go upward again. Monthly payments on the loans secured for remodeling and adding new living units to house war workers is cut down by spreading the lending period over seven years rather than five. Loans to cover 90 per cent of the cost of housing projects would be possible under the new program. Heretofore loans have run up to only 80 per cent of the cost.

Traffic Board Gives AIU Solid Backing

Advisory Council's Report to Commissioners Opposes Dissolution or Curtailment of Unit

The Commissioners were formally notified yesterday of the Traffic Advisory Council's unanimous support of the Accident Investigation Unit and of the council's disagreement with those parts of the police investigating committee's report which advocated dissolution or serious curtailment of the unit.

Commissioner Guy Mason agreed to give the recommendations serious study and said the council's findings had "kicked out many notions I had had about the unit before this meeting."

Commissioners John Russell Young and Charles W. Kutz agreed with Mason and stated they planned to arrive at a "judicious" decision on the fate of the A. I. U. They promised before reaching any final conclusion to meet again with the council's committee on legislation and enforcement, which presented the report in Young's office yesterday at noon.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the legislation committee, read the Advisory Council's recommendations aloud to the Commissioners, explaining that in voting for retention of the Accident Unit "in a modified" form, the Advisory Council meant that the modification should be on the side of strengthening rather than weakening the unit.

Reasons Presented

He reported that these recommendations had met with the full approval of Police Inspector Arthur I. Miller, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, certain judges of the Police Court, precinct commanders and representatives of civic and trade organizations.

The reasons the Traffic Advisory Council gave for its "remarkable unanimity of opinion opposed to any proposal to abolish the A. I. U." are: The superiority of its evidence on accident investigations to that presented by other members of the force; the "invaluable aid of its scientifically gathered statistics in reduction of future accidents," and the high percentage of convictions obtained by the A. I. U.

The principal modification suggested by the Advisory Council was that the A. I. U. be under the supervision of the Traffic Division captain instead of under an inspector. Although the report agreed with the Police Investigating Committee that the A. I. U. should be no more of an independent body than the motorcycle squad, it was emphatic that only a few of its minor duties should be relegated to precinct officers and that no outside duties should be thrust upon the A. I. U.

The appointment of an additional lieutenant was strongly urged, since Acting Lieut. William Liverman is on call 24 hours a day, having investigated 94 of the 95 traffic fatalities of 1941. By comparison, the Commissioners were reminded, the homicide squad had 10 men assigned to investigate approximately 60 murders.

The police committee report was criticized as being "incomplete" or "uninformed" on the two points wherein the police committee were supposed to have scored most strongly against the A. I. U.

The police committee complained that the A. I. U. answered 6363 calls in the first half of 1941, at a cost of $52,644, or $8.27 per call. Since the majority of accidents investigated by the A. I. U. involved a property loss of less than $10, the police report implied that the cost per accident was far too much for the loss involved.

The Traffic Advisory Council said that "the police report did not give a complete picture of this," since more than 50 per cent of the cases handled by the A. I. U. did not involve accidents. Therefore it is not possible to divide the cost by the number of calls to determine the cost of accident investigation.

"Misinformed" Charge

The Advisory Council accused the police committee of being "misinformed" in its charges that use of the A. I. U. encouraged the forfeiting of collateral without revocation of license. Wender stated that the revocation of licenses is up to the Board of Revocation and Review, and can be demanded even where there is forfeiture of collateral and no conviction.

He said that the frequency of forfeiture of collateral was a tribute to A. I. U.'s efficiency, proving that the unit's record of 97 per cent conviction led motorists to forfeit rather than to go to court to fight it.

At this point, Wender said the council requested the Commissioners to review the collateral lists with a view to demanding higher collaterals where extensive property damage is involved. Under the present rulings, a motorist in an accident involving hundreds of dollars damage can get off by forfeiting a maximum collateral of $10 or so.

The council requested that a double collateral list be adopted—one for traffic violations where there is no accident, and a far stricter one for violations involving personal injury or property damage.

Victory Sidelights

29th Veterans Fete Groome, Called Back to Active Duty

Blue-uniformed members of the Twenty-ninth Division, Washington Post 29, last night in the Shoreham Hotel held a surprise dinner in honor of their past commander, Maj. Milton E. Groome, who has been called to active service in the Army.

Major Groome, who is national commander of the Twenty-ninth Division Association, arrived dressed in his khaki uniform—a very surprised person.

Gen. Milton A. Reckord, past national commander of the Twenty-ninth Division Association, now on active duty with the Army in command of the Third Corps Area, was scheduled to speak. At the last minute he was unable to attend.

Guests of honor included Gen. Frank B. Watson, retired; Col. Henry S. Barrett, marshal of civilian defense, Maryland, who spoke briefly, and H. D. Jones, past national commander of the Twenty-ninth Division for the State of North Carolina.

Washington Post 29 Commander Samuel W. Barrow presided.

Tried to Steal Tire; Gets 180-Day Term

Leo R. Harley, 30, Negro, 2401 Alabama Avenue Southeast, was sentenced to 180 days in jail by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday for attempted larceny of a tire during the blackout April 14.

Police testified they caught Harley near the car with his automobile jack placed, ready for raising, under a wheel of the vehicle. The defendant said he had been repairing his own car and had kicked the jack toward the other vehicle in a moment of anger.

In finding Harley guilty, Judge McMahon declared the attempted larcency as a "vicious thing" in that the defendant was taking advantage of civilian defense authorities who were doing everything in their power to protect the welfare of the public during the present emergency.

Nursing Course Starts Today

A Red Cross home nursing course for graduate registered nurses will start today at 7:30 p. m. at 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, it was announced yesterday. Caroline R. Thomson, director of home nursing, will conduct the course.

Whipp to Address Auxiliary Police

Prof. William R. Whipp, physical director of the University Club, will be guest speaker before the Washington auxiliary police at 8 o'clock tonight in Wheatley School auditorium, 1213 Montello Avenue Northeast.

Whipp, who was a United States Army boxing director during the first World War, will talk on physical fitness and demonstrate jujitsu as used in hand-to-hand combat.

Five May Ride Now in Taxicabs

Five passengers may now ride in a cab instead of the present maximum of four, under a ruling issued yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin explained that the extra passenger is to be allowed because of the necessity of utilizing all possible taxi-space for Washington's transportation system.

Society to Display War I Posters

An exhibition of World War I posters will be held today and tomorrow by the British-American Ambulance Society at 2624 Connecticut Avenue Northwest toward a fund to purchase an ambulance for the District Red Cross.

The posters are a part of the collection owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McChrahon, 417 Thirty-fourth Street Northeast, which is said to be the most complete in the United States.

Joint Command For New Zealand

Melbourne, April 22 (U.P.). — The confused status of New Zealand in the United Nations setup was partially cleared up today when it was learned that Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley of the United States Navy had been ordered to Auckland to organize a joint American-New Zealand naval command.

The new South Pacific command will operate separately but in close liaison with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific, and his naval commander, Vice Admiral H. F. Leary.

Feat of Surgery

Doctors 'Ice' Woman's Leg To Amputate

An 83-year-old woman was the central figure yesterday of a dramatic chapter in the annals of surgery.

In Garfield Hospital she underwent the amputation of a leg with refrigeration her only anesthetic. That is, the limb was "frozen" in ordinary shaved ice and then removed. It was the first time such an operation was ever performed in Washington.

Last night the patient was progressing satisfactorily. Suffering from diabetes, complicated by heart disease, she might not have survived the operation had the conventional general anesthetic been administered, it is believed.

Operation Tuesday

The amputation was performed on Tuesday but details were withheld until yesterday, pending the outcome. Developed about 5 years ago as a form of therapy for certain conditions by a Philadelphia doctor, the refrigeration technique subsequently was applied successfully to surgery by two New York pioneers.

Dr. Emil J. C. Hildenbrand, member of the Garfield Hospital staff and instructor in surgery at Georgetown University Medical School, performed the operation on the elderly woman. She received a sedative about 3½ hours before being wheeled into the operating room. An hour later the refrigeration was started.

The patient's gangrenous leg was sheathed in four bucketfuls of shaved ice. The freezing area extended to a point on the thigh about 3 inches from the amputation line, which was above the knee.

No Anesthesia Shock

After 2½ hours the surgery was begun. The patient remained awake. When it was over, she took nourishment. There was no anesthesia shock and a minimum of surgical shock.

Advantages of refrigeration anesthesia in amputations, said Dr. Hildenbrand, are that the patient does not have to be put to sleep, which often is hazardous; there is less bleeding and chances of a drop in blood pressure are reduced.

The technique shows promise of being valuable particularly in the cases of elderly persons facing loss of limbs due to gangrene or blood vessel damage, Dr. Hildenbrand asserted.

Pass Required To Get Into New D.C. Bldg.

To pay an overtime parking ticket at the Traffic Division, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public yesterday encountered opposition—it was necessary for them to get a permit to enter Police Headquarters.

And not only did those wishing to post collateral for parking offenses experience difficulties, but everyone entering the New Municipal Center had to state his business at the door and receive permission to enter from Federal building guards.

It's the War Department's doings and the building, which houses the Quartermaster Corps, but owned by the District, is now controlled by the Provost Marshal's Office. The latter has posted Federal building guards at all entrances and these men decide who shall enter.

District Government employes working for the Health Department, Police Department and Fire Department have been photographed (by the War Department) and must wear their identification badges while in the building.

Persons not employed in the building, but having business with either District Government agencies or War Department offices, must apply at a desk at the main entrances for a temporary pass.

None may go to the traffic division to post collateral on a ticket nor to the Detective Bureau to report a robbery or witness a line-up without being escorted to and from his destination by a uniformed guard.

D. C. Boy, 5, Burned to Death At Home in Mother's Absence

Left at home alone while his mother went to visit his cousin who was burned severely last year, Melvin H. Jarboe, 5, was fatally burned at his home, 417 Riggs Road Northeast, yesterday.

MELVIN

Neighbors discovered the boy's plight when he screamed for help from the front lawn. His clothing was all afire and his entire body was enveloped in flames.

Mrs. Emma Green, who lives about 150 yards from the Jarboe home, ran to the youngster's aid and wrapped him in a blanket. A policeman's wife, Mrs. H. F. Cheeney, called police and an ambulance.

The Sixth Precinct's new ambulance-scout car was one of the first vehicles to arrive and the child was taken to Walter Reed Hospital. He died at 12:30 p. m. of third degree burns to his entire body.

Mrs. Thomas Jarboe, the boy's mother, said she left home about 10 a. m. to go to Providence Hospital, where Melvin's 2-year-old cousin, Nancy Marrman, of 640 F Street Southwest, is recovering from burns received last August.

Melvin, she said, has always been able to look after himself, and she added that Mrs. Green "always kept an eye on him."

It is believed the boy took a handful of household matches from a kitchen cupboard. Whether he was attempting to set a bonfire outdoors or whether his clothing became ignited inside the house was not determined.

Melvin's father, Thomas Jarboe, is employed at Catholic University and the boy is survived by two brothers, Harvey, 7, and Roy, 10, both of whom were at school when the tragedy occurred.

House Group Votes More Funds for Dies

By Eugene Rachlis
Copyright by Chicago Sun

A concerted drive to strip Representative Martin Dies of much of his power as chairman of the Special House Committee Investigating un-American Activities was under way yesterday after the House Accounts Committee approved a $110,000 appropriation for the Dies Committee continuation, $190,000 less than had been requested by the Texan.

At least one member of the Dies Committee, reported to be dissatisfied with the activities of his chairman, will offer a resolution at the next committee meeting to provide for regular meetings, no releases to the press without a majority vote, and additions to the staff "so a proper job may be done."

This resolution, if accepted, will virtually strip the chairman of the publicity weapons he has used recently and which have been criticized by many House members.

Mr. Dies himself did not appear before the Accounts Committee's closed hearing yesterday, but sent letters to members asking for an appropriation of $300,000. It was said that Dies, in the letter, accused the Accounts group of sabotaging the Dies Committee's work by not acting on the appropriation sooner.

Now Has Deficit

Chairman John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, of the Accounts Committee, said, however, that the requested funds were finally whittled down to $110,000—$7000 of which is needed to pay the deficit of the Dies Committee up to last March 1.

Two Congressmen who spoke against any appropriation at all—Usher L. Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota, and James F. O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana, admitted under questioning that they had voted previously on a House roll call for extension of hte Dies Committee.

Three members of Dies' committee appeared at the Accounts hearing—Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama; Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, and Joseph E. Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts. The latter two were outspoken in their criticism of the committee's current activities but said that it should be given money if it confined itself to what they called "doing the right job."

Representative Thomas H. Eliot (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said several occurrences "have made it evident that the House cannot wisely appropriate further funds for this committee."

WPB Blast Recalled

One, he said, was Mr. Dies' charges that 35 employes of the Board of Economic Warfare had "subversive connections" actually naming only 10 of them, while 9 of these have been cleared by the FBI.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, charged that "Hitler has been and is using the Dies Committee as Washington and Jasper, Tex., branches of his Nazi propaganda machine."

He presented photostatic copies of Contra-Komintern, which he said is Goebbel's personal publicity organ. This, he said, contained "article after article on testimony by J. B. Mathews—the $7600-a-year investigator of the Dies Committee."

Mayor Tells Husbands To Care for Kiddies

Sophia, W. Va. (AP)—When first-aid classes were scheduled in this Raleigh County town, a number of women complained that they would like to attend but said children couldn't be left at home alone.

Sophia's mayor, Criss Ruble, solved that problem. He delivered an "ultimatum" to all fathers hereabouts. It said, in effect, "It's your turn to stay home and play nursemaid now while th ewomen-folks get their share of war training."

Result—more than 100 women are enrolled.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Mr. George A. Garrett, who is chairman of the Washington Citizens Committee, on Navy Relief, is getting a liberal education in the prize fight business. Mr. Garrett is a stock broker whose citizens' group is cooperating with Mike Jacobs in staging a Navy Relief Fund boxing show in Washington on May 21, and he is discovering that the stock-broking business with all its mercurial trends is a tranquil humdrum compared to what little he has seen of the prize fight business.

POVICH

Everything was supposed to be all set, Mr. Garrett thought, when Jacobs announced that the principals of the May 21 show would be Freddie Cochrane, the welterweight champion, and Sugar Robinson, the Harlem sensation who has been badgering Cochrane for a shot at the title. Garrett hired a press agent for the affair and settled back to let the thing roll. Then he began to learn about the prize fight business.

Cochrane decided he didn't want to fight Robinson, the Navy Relief Fund notwithstanding. The welterweight champion reasoned that he was already making a contribution to the Navy by his presence in it. The Navy wouldn't let him off for more than a ten-day training period and he said that wouldn't be long enough to permit him to get in shape for such a tough hombre as Robinson. Mr. Garrett learned with some pain that there would be no Robinson-Cochrane fight.

Everything would be all right though, Mr. Garrett was advised. Up in New York, Promoter Mike Jacobs wasn't going to let his group down. Jacobs announced that he would put Ample Abe Simon and Buddy Baer in the ring on May 21 in Washington. That was fine stuff. Baer was a fine attraction in Washington for having knocked Joe Louis out of the Griffith Stadium ring last summer. Garrett told his press agent to go to work on that one.

Baer Forced to Decline Bout

But it was no dice. Baer decided he didn't want to fight. He said he was preparing to join the Navy, and there could be no quarrel with that sort of an excuse. Mr. Garrett and his noble purpose were getting another set-back. Somehow the prize fight business was getting very devious. Really, it could be very complicated.

There was still hope, though. Up in New York Jacobs was still pulling strings and Garrett's group was told not to worry. Jacobs had something big in mind for Washington. A few days ago he announced it. Simon would fight Lou Nova in the Washington show. This one couldn't miss. Washington hadn't seen Nova since he was a $40 preliminary boy four years ago. Meantime he had licked Max Baer twice and had become known as the Yogi Man. He would be a good drawing card against the ponderous Simon.

But that was early in the week. The other day, Mr. Garrett discovered that he didn't have any Nova-Simon bout after all. Nova was all for it, but Simon suddenly decided to retire from the prize ring. He had taken a bad beating from Joe Louis and he decided not to risk his health in any more ring battles. And so, as we went to press, Garrett's group still had the rights to the stadium on May 21 but no show to put in it.

The latest turn involves Lee Savold. Nova is still available as the party of the first part in any show that may be staged, but the identity of his opponent is still very vague with Promoter Jacobs and, consequently, Mr. Garrett. Savold's name has been brought into the picture because Jacobs, with Baer, Simon and Cochrane running out on him, is no longer so particular. It may be Savold vs. Nova.

Fight Should Be Good Contest

It could be a pretty good fight at that, and any Navy Relief show deserves the kindness of a build-up. The battle won't mean much in the heavyweight title picture, but it could be nice and gory. Savold is a stiff puncher and he could give Nova quite a go of it, and perhaps beat him. The customers would see some heavy if not fancy action and there can be no complaint with the worthiness of the cause.

The show will have an appeal "underneath," as the prize fight folks say. Already lining up as one of the supporting bouts for the top event is a match between Georgie Abrams and Steve Mamakos. Since getting knocked out by Mamakos in Washington three years ago, Abrams has moved into welter title fringe with spectacular New York successes. He will be out to avenge the Mamakos affair in a match that could stand on its own as a main attraction. That is a nice fight to have on the card, but Mr. Garrett probably won't believe it until he sees the pair in the ring on May 21.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 22.—Sportin' around:

As long as the racing people are ignoring suggestions, here are two more: Edward F. Buchanan, of Arlington, Va., suggests that half of all pay-offs at mutuel windows be made in defense stamps. A Fort Dix soldier and Fred Sarnoski, of Schenectady, write in suggesting Sunday racing, with the Army and Navy Relief Funds and the Red Cross alternating as beneficiaries . . . Understand that there was considerable squawking before it was agreed that the winner of the big league All-Star game should meet an all-service team the following day in Cleveland. Judge Landis had to remind bellyachers that baseball was an institution before it was a corporation . . . Whatever became of Pvt. Joe Louis?

CONSIDINE

Colchis, the tough little gelding that recently beat Alsab twice in a week, and ran the wonder-horse to a dead heat last fall, is not the best nag ever owned by R. Sterling Clark. But it gave that international sportsman his biggest thrill when Clark saw it win the Chesapeake last Saturday. Clark has owned horses for years, but never saw one of his win an important stake. Colchis' dam, by the way, never raced, did not have Colchis until she was 10 and blind.

If you think John Pesky, the Red Sox shortstop, has an odd name—it used to be Paveskovich. His first break was with one of Tom Yawkey's lumber camp teams, at Silverton, Oreg. . . Butch Hoffman wonders what will happen when Hugh East meets Max West, while the Giants clash with the Braves. Whatever happens, Butch believes that Billy Southworth and Phil Northey, of the Phils, will be interested.

Phil Goldsmith, of the Cincinnati sports goods firm, sets me straight on a recent assertion that only one firm—which controls one of the big league teams—would get the orders for baseball equipment with money raised at the all-star game. As many as eight different manufacturers will share in the business.

Have you, too, had nightmares about the golf balls you've carelessly cut and belted off into the woods or water for practice? But speaking of golf balls, Gene Sarazen played his second round in the Masters recently with one of the new rebuilt balls. Seems that the stuff they use for golf ball covers isn't rubber, so they just pare it off and slap some new junk on and the ball is as good as ever.

The wartime Kentucky Derbys were won by Plaudit in 1898, Omar Khayyam in 1917 and Exterminator in 1918. Victory was worth $4850 to Plaudit, $16,600 to Omar Khayyam (only foreign-bred horse ever to win it), and $14,700 to Old Bones—who paid the meaty price of $61.20, $23.10 and $12.40.

Cloria Callen will try to break Nelly Holm's old mark for the 100-yard backstroke and call it a day, as an amateur . . . Bob Cahn, formerly of the Christian Science Monitor sports staff, is now Private Cahn at Camp Chaffee, Ark. . . Ed Kiely, late of the I. N. S. sports staff, is Corporal Kiely, and Walter Stewart, former sports editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, is Captain Stewart . . . In answer to a couple of queries, Henry Armstrong kayoed Chalky Wright in three heats on February 1, 1938.

A yeoman, first class, writes from Washington that he's having trouble getting into Griffith Stadium. That right, Griff? . . . A spinal injury kept Douglas MacArthur off the West Point football teams during his career as a cadet . . . They tell me Notre Dame has the greatest freshmen material in its history.

Canada is almost certain to say "Sorry, boys," when its hockey players try to get here next season. Which means the end of United States hockey, a considerable industry. What will take its place as an arena rent-payer? Wonder if it also means the Red Sox will lose Oscar Judd? . . . Comdr. Gene Tunney was in town yesterday conferring with Navy Relief authorities about the all-star vs. all-service game. The team which Lieut. Mickey Cochrane, of Great Lakes Naval Training Station, leads against the Cubs in an exhibition this season, probably will be the nucleus of the all-service team which faces the big leaguers.

Bradley's Bless Me in Test Today

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., April 22.—Keeneland's Blue Grass Stakes tomorrow has attracted only four horses, all of them Kentucky Derby eligibles, but it may settle one prime question:

Is Col. E. R. Bradley's Bless Me a real threat in the historic Churchill Downs race?

Bless Me, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Devil Diver and Shut Out and Hal Price Headley's Equinox were named today to compete in the $10,000 added mile and a furlong test that will top the closing program of the spring meeting.

The Blue Grass Stakes since 1911 has sent four of its runners-up and one winner on to victory in the Derby.

Georgetown Turns Back G. W. Nine, 6-5

Wells Holds Opposition In Pinches

Colonials' 3 Homers Prove Futile; Hoya Pitcher Allows 7 Hits As Kloak Loses

By Jack Munhall

Nibbling away steadily at the offerings of big "Red" Kloak and alertly seizing upon every break to offset their foes' surprising batting power, Georgetown's smartly coached team eked out a 6-5 victory over George Washington at the Hilltop yesterday.

With only nine players available for the important game in the unofficial local championship race, the Hoyas built up an early lead and hung on to win their third game of the season, all against intra-District competition. The Hoyas have lost one, to West Point, 7-3. For George Washington it was the second loss in five games, both setbacks at the hands of local rivals. Maryland whipped the Colonials, 7-5, last week.

Georgetown reached Kloak for 11 hits, only one longer than a single, and took full advantage of sloppy enemy play afield to offset a powerful G. W. attack that numbered 3 homers, a triple and double among 7 concentrated hits. The Hoyas hit safely in five of their batting turns, the Colonials bunched their bingles in three big innings, home runs accounting for all their runs.

Wells Pitches Well

In the final analysis, it was the fine "clutch" pitching of Joe Wells plus the ability of the Joe Judgemen to capitalize breaks that won a tight, exciting game. Georgetown, pared down to the minimum playing strength because freshmen could not be used against a member of the Southern Conference, used two pitchers out of position. Danny Dieckelman and Danny Murphy were in right field and on first base, respectively, and had Wells needed relief, one of them would have had to trade positions with him and come into the tense game sans warmup.

A wild peg by Centerfielder Len Sokol of George Washington that let in two unearned runs in the fourth plus a wild pitch by Kloak scoring another in the sixth were the decisive factors in G. W.'s loss.

Second Baseman Bobby Gilham with towering homers in the second and again in the sixth drove in four of the Colonial tallies while the fifth

Small U. S. Team Sought For S. A. Games

By the United Press

Buenos Aires, April 22.—To prevent abandonment of the Pan-American games at Buenos Aires in November, the United States Sports Federation was urged today to send a small delegation of athletes despite last week's official withdrawal.

Alberto Regina, technical adviser for the games, appealed through the press to the United States Federation, disclosing for the first time that the Western Hemisphere's wartime substitute for the Olympics is virtually certain to be abandoned unless a United States representation of about 25 athletes is sent down.

Regina emphasized that safe transportation—probably by air—undoubtedly could be aranged for such a small group by the United States Government, which has declared in favor of the continuation of sports and which is even sending movie stars to Latin America in its campaign for Pan-American solidarity.

This small athletic Argosy "would earn the gratitude of thousands of sports fans in South America," he stressed.

Kennedy's Five-Hit Hurling Beats Browns

Cleveland, April 22.—Vernon Kennedy's courageous five-hit pitching against his old teammates gave Cleveland a tight 3-to-2 triumph over the St. Louis Browns today and a clean sweep of the three-game series.

The Brownies filled the bases with none out in the ninth on a single, a walk and a safe bunt, but were unable to tie the score as Kennedy got Vernon Stephens on an infield popper, and Pinch Hitter Glenn McQuillen and Tony Criscola on a strikeout and an outfield fly, respectively.

The second of Ken Keltner's two authentic doubles against Bob Muncrief broke a 2-all deadlock in the eighth and sent Rookie Oris Hockett over with the deciding tally. Hockett, who singled twice, scored each time on Keltner's smashes. It was St. Louis' fourth loss in a row and the Tribe's fourth straight triumph.

5 Miami Golfers Solve Tire-Ration Problem—It Works

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., April 22.—Miami's five leading amateur golfers have added a new wrinkle to solving tire problems.

The five—Earl Christiansen, Harvey Draughon, Ralph Stevens, Terb Jones and Bill Stembler—wanted to enter the State tournament at Ponte Vedra Beach. They agreed to make the trip in one car, but none wished to use his own tires.

They solved it this way: Each will contribute one tire from his own car and they'll go in Stevens' auto. For using his car, Stevens will contribute only the spare.

DiMag's Bat Helps Yanks Blast A's

Joe Clouts 2 Triples, Home Run as Champs Win Easily, 11 to 5; Chandler Victor

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—The New York Yankees went on another hitting rampage today with Joe DiMaggio collecting his second home run of the season and two triples as the World Champions crushed the Philadelphia Athletics 11 to 5.

Altogether the Yanks bombarded Bill Beckman and Dick Fowler for 13 hits for their biggest score of the young season.

With this help Spud Chandler easily acquired his second victory of the year even though touched for nine hits, including a ninth-inning home run by Pete Suder.

The Champs wasted no time getting started, scoring three times on three hits in the first inning. They loaded the bases with none out on a double by Gerry Priddy, a safe bunt by Phil Rizzuto and a walk to George Selkirk. DiMaggio lifted a fly to rightfield to score Priddy and the other two runners advanced on a bad throw to the infield by Eddie Collins, jr. Charley Keller was purposely passed to again load the bases and this time Joe Gordon dropped a Texas league single into center for two runs.

DiMaggio led off the third with his homer, two more runs counted on a walk and two hits in the fourth and DiMaggio opened the fifth with a triple and scored on a fly.

Finally in the seventh the Yanks collected four more runs and called it a day.

Early Wynn Fails to Last 1st Inning

Young Oscar Judd Scores for Bosox; Dominic DiMaggio Gets 4 of 17 Hits

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats lost to the Red Sox yesterday. They weren't nosed out. They were slapped down 13-4. The full details would make pretty horrible reading for Washington fans.

Boston belted the Nats out of the ball game almost before they were in it. They rustled up four runs in the first inning against the so-called pitching of Early Wynn and they fattened their batting averages against three other Washington pitchers with 17 hits for the afternoon.

Young Oscar Judd, who did the Boston pitching, hurled no masterpiece himself, but he had an 8-0 lead in the third inning and defied himself to pitch it away. He gave up nine hits and was asking for trouble but the Nats for the most part were making empty threats to get back into the ball game.

Gomez Fumbles Hurt

Two fumbles by Second Baseman Joe Gomez didn't help the Nats any, but Gomez was not exactly conspicuous with his loose fielding on the Washington club. The Nats generally handled the ball like it was something to be avoided.

Dominic DiMaggio didn't do the Nats any good either. He swatted four hits, including a double. Bobby Doerr put together a two-bagger and an inside the park home run. Alex Carrasquel, Walter Masterson and Phil McCullough were covictims of Wynn, but the original sin was his.

Wynn had a horrible time getting the Red Sox out in the first inning. The 3500 customers and the 2000 soldier guests saw the first three Red Sox rap him for hits. He made an attempt to get out of the inning with only one run damage when he grabbed Tabor's grounder with the bases full and started a double play via the plate, but Pete Fox came along to rap him for a two-run single and Doerr scored Fox with the fourth run of the inning on a double to left.

Carrasquel had two out in the third inning when four runs poured across the plate. Doerr banged a long drive to center that bounced past Spence and he got a home run on it when Gomez juggled the relay. A bit later Gomez muffed Judd's grounder and a bit later Di Maggio and Pesky singled to drive

Dodgers Score 4 Times in 12th to Beat Braves, 4-0

Reese's Hit Breaks Tight Mound Battle

Boston Wastes Many Hits to Lose 5th In Row; Hugh Casey Is Winning Pitcher

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 22.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves, who seem to have a mania for staging marathon battles at Braves Field, struggled scorelessly for 11 innings today until the National League champions finally exploded four runs across in the twelfth to win, 4 to 0.

Peewee Reese signaled the end by rapping a sharp single to left after the Dodgers had loaded the bases without a hit. This brought in two runs and Brooklyn added another pair before cooling off.

The outcome was bitter medicine for big Jim Tobin, who held the Dodgers to six singles over the route, only four in the first 11 innings, and himself collected three hits in trying to stir up a rally for the Braves at various times.

Tobin's opponent for the regulation nine-inning distance was Whitlow Wyatt, making his first start of the season. Because of his extended holdout and a later cold, Wyatt had pitched only nine innings in exhibition games and showed the lack of training today.

He gave Boston ten hits in nine frames, squeezing out of trouble time after time, and finally was replaced by Hugh Casey in the tenth for the joint purpose of saving Wyatt's arm and cementing the Dodgers' defense. Casey kept the Braves hitless in the three innings he worked and received credit for the victory.

Chisox Edge Tigers, 3 to 1; Ross Relieves

By International News Service

Chicago, April 22.—The Chicago White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers 3 to 1 today, but it was a narrow squeak and Buck Ross had to take a hand in the ninth to save the game for Bill Dietrich.

Each club scored a run in the first, and the Sox counted what proved to be the winning marker in the third when Don Kolloway doubled, stole third, and scored on Kuhel's fly to Cramer.

Barney McCosky and Rudy York opened the ninth with singles, whereupon Dietrich retired in favor of Ross who retired the next three Tiger batters.

Cards Defeat Faltering Reds By 6-1 Score

St. Louis, April 22.—A double and single in succession after two were out in the ninth inning spoiled a 5-hit shutout for Harry Gumbert today as the St. Louis Cardinals plastered the faltering Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 1.

The lone tally, scored on the one-two punch of Chuck Aleno and Ray Lamanni, served only as a face saver for the Reds, who were blanked yesterday, since Philadelphia's loss to the Giants was all that kept them from tumbling into the cellar.

The two Cardinal rookie stars, Ray Sanders and Stan Musial, hooked up with Veterans Terry Moore and Jimmy Brown to lead the attack with two hits apiece off Elmer Riddle, Cincinnati's surprise star of last season. Only hits off Gumbert until the ninth had been well-scattered blows.

Manager Bill McKechnie, of the Reds, rearranged his line-up and batting order, returning Bert Haas to third base and sending Aleno to second in place of Lonnie Frey, who was spiked during yesterday's game.

Giant Rookie Blanks Po', Po' Phils, 3 to 0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 22.—Dave Koslo, a rookie left-hander, pitched the New York Giants to their first shutout of the season today, 3 to 0, over the Philadelphia Phils.

The game was a pitching struggle between Koslo and young Tommy Hughes of the Phils, each of whom was touched for six hits. But while Koslo fanned eight batters and walked only one, never letting the Phillenders get out of check, the Giants' latent batting power broke out twice for all the runs that were needed.

After being held hitless for three frames, the Giants scored twice in the fourth on successive doubles by Manager Mel Ott and Johnny Mize and a single by William Marshall.

Bill Werber led off the sixth with a single advanced to third on two outs and scored on a single by Mize.

Pirates Blast Luke Hamlin, Beat Cubs, 9-1

Pittsburgh, April 22.—The Pirates backed up Luke Hamlin's seven-hit pitching with an extra-base bombardment on Paul Erickson today, shelling the Cubs with a 9-to-1 defeat.

Erickson yielded a home run, two triples, two doubles and two singles during his tenure, and the Pirates went on a five-run scoring spree in the fourth inning, also battering Vallie Eaves.

Catcher Clyde McCullough suffered a torn cartilege in his right thumb in the fourth inning and had to retire.

Lou Thuman, Property of Nats, Now Corporal at Fort Meade

Former Pitcher With Farm Team Charlotte, Thuman Now Practices With Hand Grenades

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 22.—Almost a year has gone by since Louis C. Thuman, better known as Lou in baseball circles, gave up throwing baseballs in favor of hand grenades. Lou, still the property of the Washington Senators, never got much fanfare when he entered the armed services, but he has gone steadily ahead in the Army the same way he did when he was zipping them past the edges for the Senators and their Charlotte farm team.

Announcement has been made here of his promotion to the grade of corporal in Company B, 175th Infantry, a nice piece of work during his first year in a brown uniform. It is the second promotion during the year for the quiet, likable chap who had a promising career cut short by the war.

Corporal Thuman, to call him by his Army name, entered the Army at the start of the ball season last year, on April 24. He was assigned to duty with the 175th Infantry, one of the oldest regiments in the Nation, and has stayed with his original company. His first promotion came as a New Year's present, when he received a rating of private, first class.

Not content with doing his job well, he added to his already outstanding record by receiving a citation for outstanding action during First Army maneuvers held in North and South Carolina in the fall.

Corporal Thuman hasn't given up baseball, far from it. Cheated out of his first full year in the majors, he returned to minor league ball in the form of the Twenty-ninth Division nine. He pitched winning ball and was a helpful factor with the hickory at the plate, driving in several important runs. Even though the division is leaving Fort Meade, the baseball team is making preparations to continue playing and Lou continues to figure importantly in its plans.

LOUIS THUMAN

Green Rookie Filling Reds' Relief Roles

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 22.—A young giant—6 ft. 4¾ in. tall—on the roster of the Cincinnati Reds, never pitched a game of professional baseball before this season.

Yet he went out yesterday against the St. Louis Cardinals and allowed only one hit in relieving Bucky Walters, pitching one and one-third innings. In two exhibition appearances this spring he permitted only three hits in six innings.

The sensational youngster, 20 years old next October, is Ewell Blackwell, just out of Los Angeles High School.

"He was a semipro in California and one of our men picked him up," related Manager Bill McKechnie. "He's a right-hander and during the spring, Johnny Vander Meer got into trouble and I sent in Blackwell."

Unearned Run in 11th Beats Maryland Nine for Navy, 4-3

Wharton's Wild Throw Loses Game

Navy Ties Score In 8th But Misses Chance to Win in Regulation Time

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 22.—An eleventh-inning Maryland error enabled Navy to eke out a 4-to-3 triumph over the Terps in their diamond duel on Lawrence Field today.

The teams were deadlocked 3-3 when Shortstop Warren McNamara scratched an infield hit to open Navy's eleventh. He was sacrificed to second and then proceeded to steal third.

Terp Catcher Lou Tierney pegged to Second Baseman "Pop" Wharton who heaved the ball high over Ernie Travis' head at third, McNamara scoring easily.

Prior to the final round, Navy was forced to rally on Jackie Stowe's eighth inning triple and Paul Lacy's squeeze bunt sent the contest into overtime.

Although Navy committed seven of its eight errors in the first six innings, the Middies had a chance to win in regulation time. McNamara followed Lacy's eighth inning bunt with a long triple to right center-field but was tagged out trying to stretch it into a home run.

The Terps collected their only earned run of the contest off Davis in the eighth and sent him to the showers under a four-hit attack. Stowe's tally likewise was the only run the Middies earned.

Only Three Places to P. G. A. Allotted Mid-Atlantic Pros

Two Days Set Aside for Burning Tree Practice; Keefer Cup Entrants to Play in Twosomes

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members received the rather disappointing news yesterday that only three places to the National P. G. A. Championship will be available in the sectional qualifying rounds at Burning Tree on May 4.

The sectional pros hoped to play for four or five places to the national tournament in Atlantic City May 25-30, although only three places were available last year. Entries close Friday, May 1.

The Burning Tree course will be open for practice rounds on May 1 and Sunday, May 3, in the afternoon only.

A release from Atlantic City yesterday stated that all net proceeds from the match play championship, outstanding golf tournament of the year, would go to Army and Navy relief funds.

Keefer Cup Players To Go in Twosomes

The starting field in next week's Keefer Cup Tournament, opening event on the District Women's Golf Association card, will play in twosomes and the policy may be in effect for all future tournaments, Mrs. W. L. Weible, president of the association, announced last night.

Play in threesomes will be dropped because of the caddy shortage as three players take two caddies while two players can double up. Foursomes would be too slow All players must double up in caddies, and visiting players are requested to bring their own.

Entries close tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock with Mrs. C. B. Magruder, tournament chairman. The affair is listed for next Tuesday and Wednesday at Chevy Chase for the trophy donated by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, former president of the association. Entry or budget book fees must accompany the entry.

Mrs. Weible also called attention to the Pro Lady Tournament entries closing May 11 for the Kenwood Tournament on May 11. Players with handicaps of scratch to 18 are eligible.

Maryland State Handicap Week Dates

The Maryland State Golf Association's annual spring drive for revenue will be concentrated on State Handicap Week May 1-8, inclusive. Golfers of member clubs can secure the cards making them eligible for the State's tournament card at $1 each from the home club professional. The handicap cards make players eligible for the handicap week tournaments, with net prizes awarded.

COLUMBIA

The Columbia Country Club golf committee and Reds Banagan have arranged an unrationed program for the opening day program on May 2. Lunch, a scotch foursome tournament, special events and a buffet supper are on the program.

Each player must buy a ticket for $1, and more than one if desired, with one-third of the proceeds to Navy Relief, one-third to Army Relief and the other to a United States savings bond pool.

ARMY AND NAVY

Mrs. M. J. Torlinski proved to be the best tee-to-green golfer in the Army-Navy weekly women's tournament yesterday, winning the fairway shots event with a 56, minus two-thirds handicap strokes, 7, for a net 49.

Mrs. W. B. Mackintosh and Mrs. G. D. Dickey tied for second with 67—13—54, and 61—7—54, respectively. Three tied at the next number, Mrs. B. L. Braun, 75—17—57; Mrs. E. E. Hermann, 72—14—58, and Mrs. C. B. Magruder, 66—8—58.

Army-Navy Starting Game Times Are Set

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Comdr. L. S. Perry, Naval Academy graduate manager of athletics, said today the Army-Navy baseball and track contests would begin at 2:30 p. m. and 3:30 p. m., respectively, here May 27.

Georgetown Turns Back G. W., 6 to 5

came across on Sokol's circuit clout to deep rightfield.

Wells, a product of Wilson High School here and a disappointment for Georgetown last year, seemed to be operating on an all-or-nothing basis: that is he was either mowing the Colonials down effortlessly or letting them knock the ball out of the park.

The slim junior struck out five, three in the fifth, and walked four. Kloak fanned only one and passed four in suffering his season's first loss against two victories.

Tight fielding behind Wells in the sixth choked off a G. W. rally that threatened to tie up or even clinch the game. After Sokol homered to start the inning, Roy McNeil doubled and Billy Robertson singled to place the tying run on third and a prospectie winning tally on second with none out. But the next three G. W. batters couldn't get a run for their money.

Joe Gyrogydeak ran into short right center to grab John Konizewski's pop and hold the runner on third with a perfect throw to the plate. Then Johnny Smith came in fast to take Gilham's looper to center and again bluff McNeil back to third. Thus sustained, Wells fanned Jack Fitzgerald to end the inning.

John Baltronkones Hurls C. U. To 4-2 Victory Over Navy Yard

Cardinal Pitcher, In Mound Debut, Blanks Opponents With No Hits in Five Innings

Catholic University's newly organized baseball team came up with another good pitching prospect yesterday and beat the local Navy Yard Marines, 4-2, in a hastily scheduled game at Brookland. The teams will play another game later.

John Baltronkones, in his mound debut for C. U.'s first nine in six years, worked five hitless, runless innings and took credit for the victory. Bernie Cody, who relieved Baltronkones, was touched for three hits which produced the Marines' runs in the seventh.

The Cardinals, scoring their third triumph against no losses, got six hits off Barr, who went the route for the losers. Barr pitched creditably, was credited with 10 strikeouts, 6 more than racked up by Baltronkones.

C. U. picked up a run in the first and three in the second. A walk to Valenza, a fielder's choice by Beaudry, forcing Valenza, and singles by Brosnahan and Norris produced C. U.'s first tally. In the second the Marines' defense blew up and a triple by Street and three errors chased over a trio of markers.

Third Baseman Beaudry of the Cards was the fielding star of the game, his pickup of Rose's grounder to force out Curtin at second being especially notable.

Flynn and Bobo Sign to Fight Here

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, of Uline Arena, announced last night that Harry Bobo, of Pittsburgh, and Johnny Flynn, of Rochester, N. Y., will headline the boxing show at the Northeast sports palace next Wednesday night.

Flynn is a young heavyweight who has fought Bob Pastor, Gus Doraizo, and Freddie Fidduccia.

Bobo, recent knockout victor of Lem Franklin, was scheduled to meet Abe Simon in Pittsburgh next Monday, but Simon's retirement from the ring forced cancellation of the fight.

Simon Just Running Out, Says Promoter

Pittsburgh, April 22 (AP).—Matchmaker Jake Mintz said today he was convinced there was "something funny" about Boxer Abe Simon's decision to retire from the ring and that he would ask the New York Boxing Commission to inquire into the matter.

"It's subbotash, that's what it is, subbotash," exclaimed the matchmaker, whose picturesque language always carries an accent all its own. "It is the third time Simon and his manager, Jimmy Johnson, have walked out on us rather than fight Harry Bobo."

Simon's announcement to retire came little more than a week before his scheduled ten-round bout here April 27 with the slugging Bobo, who kayoed Lem Franklin recently in one round. Simon attributed his retirement to a back injury and his wife's reluctance to let him continue fighting.

Mintz, who is matchmaker for the Art Rooney-Barney McGinley boxing combine, said $12,000 in advance sales will have to be returned and that a cancellation would cost $12,000. He is trying to substitute Red Burman for Simon.

Mintz said he had received last week the "inside information" on the move to have Simon "retire for a time," and on Friday conferred in Cleveland with Johnston and received assurance Simon would come for the fight "if he has but one leg."

"Why only on Sunday Simon said in a radio broadcast he never felt better and would beat Bobo, Lou Nova and others," continued Mintz.

True North Victor of $2500 Aberdeen Stakes at the 'Graw'

Hygrohour, Choice, Bows By 6 Lengths

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22.—True North, trained by Preston Burch of Washington, D. C., showed that the Bowie Kindergarten was an unruly-run race today when he hung a six-length defeat on John L. Sullivan's Hygrohour, the 2-year-old from deep in the heart of Texas. In the Kindergarten, Hygrohour escaped trouble and went on to defeat Kopia and True North, a couple of star juveniles from the Hialeah campaign. In the $2500 added Aberdeen Stakes today, True North obtained clear sailing and it was hardly a contest.

Although winning handily and by himself, True North came within a fifth of a second of equaling the track and race record over 4½ furlongs, a route that has drawn some of the best horses in 29 other runnings of the Aberdeen. He was clocked in 0.53 1-5, only the fraction above the mark shared by Mother Goose, Single Foot, Fiddlesticks, Rockman, Vander Pool and Bonanza.

The crowd of 12,000 believed Hygrohour unbeatable and kept the greenbacks moving through the windows at a steady pace. True North, owned by the Howe Stable, was second choice and rewarded his faithful backers with a $7.10 mutuel. This was True North's third victory in four starts, his only defeat coming in the aforementioned Kindergarten in which he was almost knocked down.

Although Jockey Johnny Deering, who rode Hygrohour, did not make a claim of foul, backers on True North, who were watching the race closely, had some anxious moments before the "official" signal was lighted. True North was drawing away from Hygrohour entering the stretch when he got out of control of Jockey Al Schmidl momentarily. He bore out but fortunately was clear of his rival. The consensus of the pressbox was that Deering would make an objection, but he weighed in after the race and walked off toward the jockeys' room.

True North made sure that he would not get in a tangle today. With Jockey Schidl urging him, the son of Only One came out of the gate on top and it was there he stayed. He opened a good lead in the first few jumps. Hyrohour, however, broke clearly and Deering sent him up, on the outsided of the leader. Fortunately, True North had speed enough to draw clear just before he ran out at the final bend. Deering saw True North losing ground and he sent Hyrohour to the inside. Quillon, working his way to contention, also cut to the inside to save ground.

MISRULE lacked early speed after being first away, was forced wide to improve position and hung in final drive. BRIGHT CAMP was steadied on inside for half and flattened out when put to pressure.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

As we predicted, Jockey George Woolf has accepted the mount on the Valdina Farms' Hollywood in the Kentucky Derby. Jocky (No Boy) Jacobs, everybody's boy, is busy these days working for War Relief. He has sold several hundred dollars worth of tickets for the "Victory Caravan of Stars," the show for Army and Navy relief booked at Loew's Capitol Theater on Thursday, April 30. "All the movie stars are going to be there," says Jake. As usual, Jake only wants to deal with the best so he sells only $10 and $20 tickets. He is selling those $20 tickets, in the "golden horseshoe" boxes, to the jockeys. One of the riders bought six. Good cause, good boy this Jake—see you on the balcony rail. Pimlico put out the weights for two of next week's stakes yesterday. Transfigure, with 122 pounds, gets top weight in the $2500 added Baltimore Spring Handicap on Monday while Colchis, at 126, is due to carry the heaviest impost in the $2500 added Rennert Handicap on Tuesday. Trainer George Cook is passing out the cigars. Mrs. Cook presented him with a baby girl yesterday. That's three fillies for the likeable couple. Trainer Joe Roberts is doing O.K. with those John L. Sullivan horses from deep in the heart of Texas and Johnny Deering is riding them brilliantly. One of the most sparkling workouts witnessed at Pimlico this spring was turned in by Chiquita Mia, Charles S. Howard's candidate for the $10,000 added Pimlico Oaks, stepping three-quarters in 1:13 in very handy fashion. The bay daughter of Hadagal and Home Star, ridden by the veteran exercise boy, Ted Kinsley, was full of run as she broke away at the three-quarter pole and stepped the opening quarter in 0:23 3-5. After reaching the half mile in 0:47 2-5, she did 5 furlongs in 1:00 3-5 and Kinsley reached for another wrap. Trainer Tom Smith stated that Chiquita Mia, which finished third in the Pimlico Futurity last autumn, would not race before the Oaks on May 2 and she probably will be given a more extensive trial early next week to complete her preparation for the mile and one-sixteenth event. Smith also had Mioland out for a spin of 6 furlongs in 1:14 2-5. Trainer Lucius Harlan reported that Ben Shaba was training so satisfactorily that he intended running the son of Islam and Shades of Night in the Rennert Handicap at Pimlico Tuesday. Ben Shaba, who was narrowly beaten in the Pimlico Nursery Stakes last spring, is owned by Mrs. R. D. Patterson, of Dayton, Ohio. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—DOT'S KEY came from behind and won going away like a good one last out. I'm going to string along with this juvenile. The three-way Babylon-Bryson-Shouse entry of THE DUCK, BILL'S ANN and VEE will be hard to keep out of the pay circle. GOLD RETRIEVER is said to be a good one.

Second race—ZENANA has a class edge on this kind and likes a sprint route. I'm going to string along. OLYMPIAN has speed and will be a keen factor. STREAMER is a longshot possibility.

Third race—FOGOSO was only kidding last out and I look for another of those efforts of the smashing type. Needs only the right ride. IMPERIAL IMPY and DOUBLE B. were a close fit last out and will be in the thick of it today.

Fourth race—SOBRIQUET, with only 100 pounds, appears to be the day's best bet. If this one breaks it will be all over but the payoff. BLUE TWINK had speed last year. RIDING LIGHT for the minor award.

Fifth race—COLUMBUS DAY gets in light and has shown me enough to warrant a top selection even in this good company. GREY WING was a disappointing favorite last week and may make amends. BLUE STEEL to take care of the others.

Sixth race—SEAWAY may be a longshot winner in this distance affair. Gets in light and I'm going to take my chances. TOUR and QUESTION MAN to fill out the money bracket.

Seventh race—I'm going to take another long one in this field. I mean DARBY DU. This one is ready and may beat these at a boxcar figure. NAVY ran out entering the stretch last time. CREEPY MOUSE for the third money.

Eighth race—HINDU SPY is one out of my "remember book." This one can whip these with the right handling. GENTLE SAVAGE is consistent and the probable favorite. CAVALIER for the show end.

Best bet—SOBRIQUET.

Agents Discuss War Risk

Uncle Sam temporarily insures every United States citizen against war damage, but private insurance agents intend to take an active part in the final operation of the war damage corporation, R. W. Forshay, of Anita, Iowa, president of the National Association of Insurance Agents, told the semiannual meeting of that body recently in New York City.

Forshay discussed the war damage bill recently passed by Congress and now awaiting execution under an operating plan formulated by Jesse Jones. The new legislation must be placed in operation by July 1.

"We believe that the operation of the war damage corporation can be handled most effectively by the insurance industry," Forshay said. "We also believe that the industry is ready and desirous to undertake this task as a patriotic responsibility on a nonprofit basis."

Coffee Futures Trade Limited

New York, April 22 (AP).—Managers of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange ordered today that beginning tomorrow all trading in coffee futures contracts be confined to liquidation. Quotations have been at Federal price ceilings for some time.

The difficulty of obtaining coffee for delivery under contracts was the reason given by trade sources for the order, which was similar to the one which followed stagnation of sugar futures trading.

Exchange sources said the liquidation might possibly extend to December of this year, the furthest futures contract now traded, or could be expedited.

Futures trading on the exchange had been in doldrets for months, holders of contractors being reluctant to sell since the shipping space scarcity had cut sharply into United States coffee imports.

Phelps Dodge Copper Output to Set Peak

New York, April 22 (AP).—With the aid of large tonnages from the Morenci, Ariz., mine after five years development, Phelps Dodge Corporation will establish a new record copper production in 1942, Louis S. Cates, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting.

Operations in all the company's mines, smelters, refineries and fabricating plants are currently on a basis of seven days a week, three turns a day, Cates said, adding that the company would make every effort to maintain capacity operations.

On the basis of tax rates now in effect, Cates estimated profits in the first quarter $4,470,000 after all charges but before depletion. This would be equal to 38 cents a share on the capital stock. No comparison with 1941 could be made because the company reports on a six months basis.

City Planners Seek Means of Curbing Decentralization of Home and Industry

The Nation-wide trek of American workmen is creating new problems, but it is sharpening an old one that has had city planners sitting up nights thinking of the future.

In the past ten years, real estate management experts point out, there has been a migration of people, business and industries from city centers to suburbs. They call this movement "decentralization."

Explaining that such a decentralization puts a tense strain on city finances because of lost revenue, the Urban Land Institute, an independent agency for research in the real estate field, has said:

"If decentralization continues, cities will face financial ruin since most of them have already reached their legal as well as their practical borrowing limits."

Now under the stimulus of war, hundreds of thousands of workmen are on the march to new jobs in some of the more than 400 "critical" production centers.

They are not going in any single direction since war plants are scattered along both coasts as well as inland.

One real estate research agency has just reported that the movement of household goods around the country by motor carriers so far this year was 50 per cent greater than in the same period a year ago.

But total labor migration can be considered greater even than that shown by moving vans for much of it is done by automobile, many families selling their furniture or putting it in storage.

This helter-skelter scramble for jobs, however, may soon be channeled for Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the new War Manpower Commission, already has said that the machinery for making certain all available manpower was utilized for war production would include a labor priorities system.

At the same time, emphasizing the manpower need for war production, McNutt pointed out that 13 million workers would be placed in jobs in the next year.

In many cases the workers are going to jobs in industries which, following the trend, have been built on the outskirts of cities or even miles from cities.

As a result of this, observers have noted:

War industries scattered around the fringes of cities, many of them new and highly modern plants, can convert to peace time production once the war is over and have plenty of room for expansion.

Workers employed in those plants are going to live as near them as possible, particularly now that the use of automobiles must continue to diminish as the war continues.

In the post-war period, desirous of retaining their jobs, they are very apt to wish to remain close to their work. Or, when automobiles come back in use, move even further out in the suburbs or rural areas where rents are cheaper.

Various private organizations, university economists, real estate managers and government agencies are giving intensive thought to the problem of housing and business in and around cities in the post-war period.

The Urban Land Institute is conducting investigations to make cities more attractive for dwellings and business.

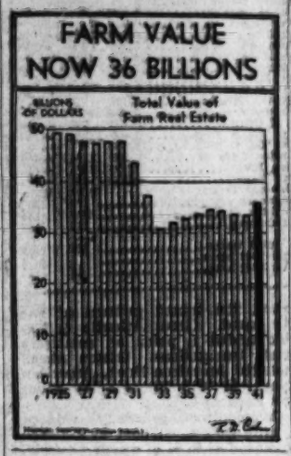
The institute, after a preliminary survey on the cause of decentralization by expert appraisers and brokers in 221 cities, listed the following as highly important factors in the trend:

High city taxes, land values and rentals; difficulty of quick rail transportation for industries; inability of industries to expand in crowded urban sections.

These factors were also listed:

Congested critical business areas; too many high buildings which tend toward too intensive use of land and have a depressing effect on nearby smaller buildings; rigidity of local tax systems "which, due to pressure for municipal revenue, do not adjust themselves to changing conditions;" street hazards; schools "unsatisfactory because of politics;" smoke; dirt, and noise.

The institute asserted "the great period of skyscraper building appears to be over" while it was pointed out that great modern industrial empires prefer to spread out laterally—or over a wide area—instead of perpendicularly, floor upon floor skyward. Helping the decentralization, according to the institute, is the "ribbon development of business," or the building of business properties along arterial highways and main streets instead of in a central section.



Adheres to Rules, Claims Steel Firm

Pittsburgh, April 22 (AP).—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation today posted in its plants notices signed by President J. L. Perry which said, "There has not been, nor will there be in this company any repeated, deliberate violations of priority regulations'" as charged by the United States Department of Justice.

Referring to a complaint of priorities violations filed Monday against the U. S. Steel subsidiary by the department, Perry told employes:

"In order to assure all of you that this unwarranted incident in no way reflects upon the magnificent production job that has been and is being accomplished within this company in furthering the war effort, I want to let everyone know that we have been doing and will continue to do everything possible to serve our country in its great hour of need."

Stockholder Seeks Air-Way Bonus Ban

Toledo, Ohio, April 22 (AP).—A stockholder filed suit in Common Pleas Court today asking that directors of the Air-Way Electric Appliance Corp., be enjoined from voting themselves bonuses or increased salaries.

Lowell Goerlich, a Toledo attorney, brought the action against Joseph H. Nuffer, George D. Welles, Lawrence G. Pierce, Henry W. Seney, Dewey M. Dow and Clement O. Miniger. All are directors of the company and Air-Way Branches, Inc.

Late Earnings Statements

William Wrigley, Jr., Co. and domestic subsidiaries reported for the quarter ending March 31, 1942, net profit of $1,524,638, equivalent to 78 cents a share on 1,904,327 shares outstanding. This compared with $2,371,419, or $1.21 a share for the corresponding period a year ago.

Westinghouse Air Brake Co. and subsidiaries reported $1,117,867 net profit for the March quarter after provision for income and excess profits for the March quarter after provision for income and excess profits taxes, or 35 cents a share. This compared with revised earnings of $1,358,768, or 42 cents a share in the like 1941 quarter.

North American Rayon Corp. for the 12 weeks ended March 21 reported earnings of $489,187 or 91 cents a share on combined A and B common stock, compared with $439,851 or 79 cents on A and B stock in the like period ended March 22 last year.

National Biscuit Co. announced net profit of $2,431,289, or 32 cents a common share for the March quarter, compared with $2,788,866, or 37 cents a share in the comparable 1941 quarter.

Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp and subsidiaries reported consolidated net income for the three months ended March 31 was $1,189,928, equal, after provision for preferred dividends, to 47 cents a common share, compared with $1,487,808, or 60 cents a share, in the corresponding 1941 period.

Week's Power Output Lowest Since January

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Edison Electric Institute reported today power production in the United States in the week ended April 18 totaled 3,307,760,000 kilowatt hours, smallest since January and a drop of .4 of 1 per cent from the previous week against a normal seasonal expectation for an increase.

The week before the energy output was 3,320,858,000 kilowatt hours and a year ago 2,897,307,000. This indicated the total was holding 14.2 per cent above 1941 figures.

Dividend Total Shows Drop in First Quarter

Total dividend disbursements on common stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange amounted to $430,173,000 in the first quarter, against $436,162,000 in the first quarter of 1941, and on listed preferred stocks the disbursements amounted to $78,627,000, against $80,513,000 in the first three months last year, according to the April issue of "The Exchange," published by the New York Stock Exchange.

Dividends were paid in the quarter by 457 common stocks out of 836 listed, as against 430 dividend payers in the first quarter of 1941. Dividend rates were raised in the first quarter on 108 common stock issues and reduced on 69.

Many Groups Show Gain

The largest increase in dividends among the stock groups was that of 255 per cent for the electrical equipments, but this result was affected by a change in the payment date of General Electric. On an adjusted basis the increase for this group was 16 per cent.

Other groups showing substantial increases in dividend outlays in the quarter were shipbuilding and operating, 80 per cent; garment, 45 per cent; paper manufacturing and publishing, 36 per cent; machinery and metal, 16 per cent, and farm machinery, 15 per cent. Decreases in dividend totals took place in the automobile, rubber and retail merchandising groups.

The following table shows the dividend disbursements on the various common stock groups in the first quarter:

Equal to 1937

Common stock dividends of listed companies in 1941 were nearly equal in the aggregate to the amount paid in 1937.

"The most striking fact revealed by the figures," says the Exchange, "is that despite some current impressions of 'excessive wartime profits' a number of industries are not doing as well as in 1937. This is true of some war industries, such as electrical equipment and machinery and metal, as well as of consumer trades, including amusement, food, and retail merchandise companies."

Dividends Reduced By Liggett & Myers

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a common and common "B" share, payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 12, compared with previous payments of $1 quarterly.

A company statement said that earnings after Federal taxes would be the governing factor in determining whether subsequent quarterly dividends would be more or less than 75 cents a share. In addition to the tax factor, the company noted that while sales were ahead of last year, manufacturing costs also had risen.

War Emphasis Seen Shifting From Output to Transport

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—The Iron Age reported today it had found evidence that the flood of war production in the United States was approaching such a stage that storage and shipping space were becoming serious problems.

In its weekly review, the magazine commented that within a reasonably short time the emphasis might shift from intensifying manufacture of war implements to speeding their transport to battle areas. It said thousands of combat vehicles were awaiting shipment to war zones.

"Soon the surplus of war goods, which involves other factors than ship sinkings, will spread from combat vehicles, in which a tremendous flow might be expected, to other war materials and implements. Already a few plants are said to fear that they soon will receive 'stop production orders or 'slow down' orders.

"Against the almost daily announcement of new records in production of steel and other vital materials, against the frequent Navy 'E' awards to industry for war output accomplishments must be set the new drive by the War Production Board, assisted by the Department of Justice, on violations of priority regulations.

"Complete allocation of machine tools now seems likely to go into effect before July 1, according to a 'stamp' plan now being set up by the WPB. The new system, which will set aside the present priority control and the numerical urgency rating list, will be issued by WPB for every machine tool now on order. After the effective date, a buyer must obtain a stamp from one of three issuing authorities before an order can be given to a machine tool builder for a machine."

Such tool allocations, the Iron Age said, would be in the hands of the Army and Navy munitions board—which also would represent the Maritime Commission—the Lend-Lease authority, and the WPB itself, which would handle machinery for strategic industries such as synthetic rubber, high octane gasoline and explosives.

The Iron Age estimated the Nation's steel production this week at 99 per cent of capacity, equalling in actual tonnage the record high of two weeks ago, crediting it to completion of repairs.

Scrap Rubber Salvage Urged

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Ohio, April 22.—There ought to be a law requiring individuals to turn over discarded rubber to a scrap collection agency, the WPB's national salvage clinic was told today.

"There are thousands of rubber articles in homes throughout the Nation, but some means must be found to get this scrap into the factories," William Welch of Chicago, president of the Midwest Rubber Reclaiming Co., said.

"It may be necessary for the Government to organize a rubber collecting agency and make it against the law to retain old rubber."

Welch asserted spare tires are hidden in the cellars of "millions of motorists" against the time when tires now in use are worn out, and added:

"I am sure most persons will not turn in a tire as long as there is a mile of wear left in it. The only thing that will make the American motorist give up his tires is to make it illegal to own them.

"The rubber reclaiming industry can produce 350,000 tons of rubber annually if it has the cooperation of the Government, the people and the scrap dealers. Activities in collecting scrap rubber have bogged down sadly. The country must be combed for scrap that has been thrown away, particularly in remote areas."

Carborundum Head Retires

By the Associated Press

Niagara Falls, N. Y., April 22.—Dr. Frank J. Tone, famed electrochemist, retired today as president of the Carborundum company with which he has been associated since 1895.

Dr. Tone, father of Franchot Tone, motion picture actor, was appointed chairman of the board of directors, a new position, and Artur A. Batts, secretary of the abrasive manufacturing concern, became president.

The board of directors also announced teh retirement of Frank H. Manley, sr., as treasurer and appointed his assistant, Thomas B. Foot, to succeed him.

Vice President Henry P. Kirchner was promoted to executive vice president in charge of operations and a member of the board. Frank A. Vukrodt, auditor, was named to succeed Batts as secretary.

Dr. Tone's son, Frank J., jr., a sales executive, was elected a vice president and board member.

Lead Stocks Increase

New York, April 22 (AP).—The American Bureau of Metal Statistics said today stocks of refined lead in the United States amounted to 27,760 tons at the end of March against 24,830 at the end of February.

U. S. Gasoline Stocks Display Seasonal Dip

By the Associated Press

New York, April 22.—The Nation's gasoline stocks declined 1,078,300 barrels, about normal for this season, in the week ended April 18 to a total of 103,502,000 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute reported today.

Light fuel oil stocks showed a drop of 673,000 barrels in the same period to 29,929,000 barrels but residual or heavy fuel oil supplies rose 51,000 barrels to a total of 82,577,000 at the end of the week.

At the request of the Office of Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes the institute combined the refinery activity and product inventories for the East Coast, Texas Gulf Coast, Louisiana Gulf Coast, North Louisiana-Arkansas and inland Texas districts. This made it impossible to determine changes in oil product supplies of the rationing-threatened East Coast.

Daily average crude oil production for the week was up slightly at 3,545,000 barrels compared with 3,543,400 the week before and 3,752,650 a year earlier.

Refinery operations for the Nation as a whole averaged 75.7 per cent of capacity, indicating a crude run of 3,548,000 barrels daily, compared with 75.1 per cent and 3,518,000 barrels the previous week.

Gasoline production totaled 11,005,000 barrels against 10,734,000 the week before.

Meanwhile, Petroleum Coordinator Ickes yesterday cut the national production rate of petroleum liquids to 3,674,500 barrels daily during May, reflecting the inadequacy of transportation outlets from the Gulf Coast production area.

The May rate is almost 280,000 barrels below the recommended daily rate for April and considerably under the Bureau of Mines forecast of 3,729,000 barrels as the daily demand for crude oil alone.

Furnaces at New High

Cleveland, April 22 (AP).—Furnaces in blast, depending principally on Lake Superior iron ore, hit a new high last month at 181 of the available 189, the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today.

On the Civilian War Front

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday blamed persistent reports of a pending increase in present fats and oil price ceilings for a "withholding of substantial cottonseed oil, soybean oil, and tallow supplies from market to the detriment of industry and the entire war effort."

The reports, he declared, were "utterly without foundation" and stocks should be moved now at current "fair and equitable" prices before additional plants are forced to shut down because of inadequate supplies.

At the same time, Henderson announced that specific prices for some 125 varieties of fats and oils at certain basing points throughout the country would be established soon. He emphasized that the new ceiling "generally will spell out specifically the same prevailing ceilings under which the industry now is operating."

A Senate Agriculture Subcommittee was told yesterday the Nation's beverage alcohol distilleries were going to work to produce industrial alcohol for the war effort, utilizing grain to relieve the sugar shortage.

M. J. MacNamara, of the alcohol and solvents section of the War Production Board, said the program for utilization of the distilleries had started recently on an experimental basis in Maryland and Kentucky.

MacNamara said 13 distillers in Maryland and many in the Louisville area of Kentucky now were producing low-proof alcohol, which then in turn was shipped to central points for redistillation to 190 proof industrial alcohol used in making explosives. He pointed out that the distilleries were not equipped for making 190 proof alcohol.

A 5 per cent increase in manufacturers' prices on steel screening—now the only type of metal screening available to householders—was approved yesterday by the Office of Price Administration.

The increase covered black-painted and mesh galvanized screening, representing about 30 per cent of the total steel cloth production.

OPA said its approval was based on the fact that a substantial part of the total output comes from companies "which are marginal in their over-all picture and unable to operate" under present ceiling prices on iron and steel products.

The WPB recently froze all stocks of copper screening, also widely used in the past for door and window screening.

The War Production Board said yesterday that by midnight last night 30 of the 55 companies producing civilian radios will have closed down under Government orders to convert their entire facilities to war work.

The remaining 25 companies have been allowed extensions ranging from one to six weeks in which to produce additional sets, facilitating their conversion program. Half of the approximately 410,000 radios manufactured after midnight last night will be reserved for export to friendly nations.

The Metals Reserve Co. announced yesterday that, in order to stimulate domestic production of tungsten, a vital war metal, the company has extended until the end of 1943 its purchase price of $24 per ton for the metal. The Metals Reserve Co. is a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Other actions taken yesterday by the various war agencies include:

Industrial machinery—restrictions on production of critical industrial machinery have been removed by WPB until May 15 to avoid disruption of schedules in plants preparing to convert to the output of war supplies.

Tires—Authority for the plan, recently announced by OPA, under which long haul bus and truck operators may acquire emergency reserves of tires and tubes was issued by OPA.

Lawn mowers—Formation of lawn mower industry advisory committee was announced by WPB.

Heating—Appointment of David H. Butler, Elgin, Ill., as chief of heating section of WPB was announced. This section is responsible for such heating equipment as boilers, furnaces, oil burners, radiators and unit heaters.

Nickel—WPB established complete control over nickel scrap. The order requires segregation of scrap containing more than one-half of 1 per cent nickel by weight and permits its melting only for authorized uses.

Bosox Hitters Tee Off, 4 Nat Hurlers Routed

Walter Masterson gave up a run to the Red Sox in the fourth, and in the eighth and ninth they slugged Big McCullough for four more to send their total into double figures.

The Nats had their moments, though—and made the least of 'em. After Gomez opened the third with a walk, Pinch Hitter Gaille hit into a double play. Case and Spence followed with singles and Mickey Vernon rapped a 3-2 pitch against the scoreboard for a triple that fetched two runs. Ortiz drew a walk but Estalella drew a third strike in this crisis. In the sixth, the Nats had the bases filled with one out after Evans singled and Repass plunked a looping double to right. Gomez drew a walk, but Pinch Hitter Bruce Campbell bounced to Judd and Evans was out at the plate. Case scored two runs with a single to left and Spence drew a walk to fill the bases again, but Judd was smitten with luck on the next play. Vernon rifled a hot shot toward right field and First Baseman Lupien speared it with a fancy stab.

Leonard Ailing

That was the Nats' last gasp.

Dutch Leonard originally was scheduled to face the Red Sox yesterday but he came down with a sore throat . . . He'll pitch today against Yank Terry whose last outing was a five-hit job against the Yankees who beat him 1-0 . . . Griffith Stadium officials announced that henceforth all foul balls returned by the fans will be given to Army and Navy ball teams . . . Washington's housing shortage was so acute Tuesday night that following the Nats' return from Boston outfielders George Case and Stan Spence were forced to spend the night on cots in the locker room . . . Manager Bucky Harris gave Central High School first baseman, Ray Hill, a long look in a pre-game workout, and asked the lad to take another tryout on Sunday . . . He doubts Hill's ability to hit . . . An attack of pleurisy kept Jake Early out of the line-up yesterday but he is expected to catch Leonard today . . . The Nats will definitely show up for the game . . .

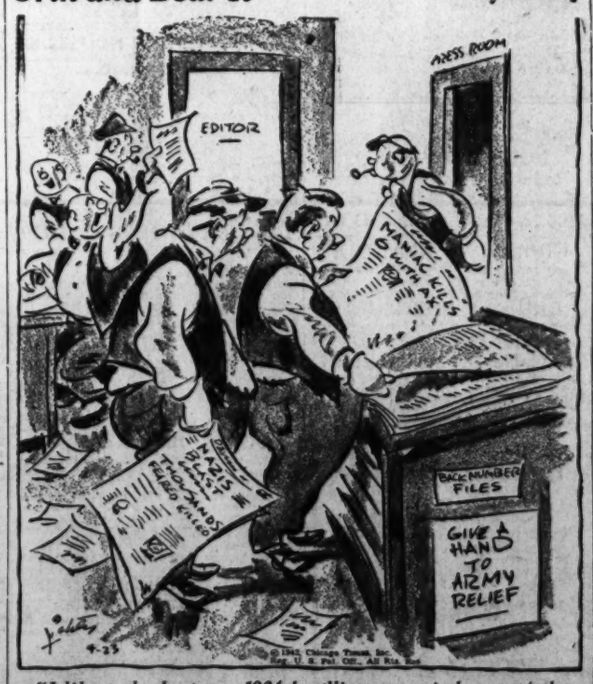
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty



"I like to look at our 1934 headlines—reminds me of the gay, carefree days."

Listen! with Glynn

It will be a cozy little dinner party that you'll be hearing from over WJSV at 8:30 tonight.

Its only difference from the usual dinner party will lie in the fact that the host will be 3,000 miles away from his guests.

For the first time since its inception almost four years ago, the Columbia network's "People's Platform" is to have its dining and debating done on two sides of the Atlantic Ocean. The guests who will join Moderator Lyman Bryson for the dinner table discussion are four distinguished Britishers who are to sit around a table deep in an underground London studio, while Bryson leads the discussion sitting alone at a dining table high in the network's New York headquarters building, where he usually presides at the forum dinners.

It is there that Bryson customarily opens the debate, then switches on a hidden microphone—unknown to the diners—as they warm up to their subject. The warming up process will be done in London tonight, however, by Bob Trout, of the C. B. S. staff.

The guests are Megan Lloyd George, daughter of Britain's World War I prime minister, herself a member of Parliament and known as a brilliant speaker and leader of social reforms; Commander Stephen King-Hall, also an M. P., editor and former officer of the Royal Navy; Lieut. Col. Sir Edward W. M. Craig, former Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for War, and Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information in the Churchill cabinet.

Oh, yes; They're going to talk about the war effort.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South at a four-heart contract, and West opens the king of spades and follows with the ace. When East encourages his partner by playing the six and then the deuce, a third spade is led, East's queen winning. East returns the diamond ten, and declarer must take the balance of the tricks. How would you develop the deal from this point? The solution is given below.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 10 5 3 ♡ 7 6 4 3 ◇ A 8 5 ♣ A J 2
WEST: ♠ A K 9 4 ♡ None ◇ 9 7 4 3 2 ♣ Q 10 7 4
EAST: ♠ Q 6 2 ♡ K 10 5 2 ◇ 10 6 ♣ 8 6 5 3
SOUTH: ♠ J 8 7 ♡ A Q J 9 8 ◇ K Q J ♣ K 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♠ K.

The Solution

Declarer makes his four-heart contract by taking an otherwise unnecessary club finesse in order to create a vital entry to dummy.

He overtakes one of his diamond honors with dummy's ace at the fourth trick and leads back a small heart, finessing the queen successfully when East follows with a small trump. Then West discards, and the 4-0 split is disclosed. Declarer sees he must enter dummy twice more to finesse against East's trump king. The club ace is one entry; the other can be realized in the jack of clubs if West holds the queen. South therefore leaods the club nine and finesses the jack, which holds. Another small heart is returned; if East plays the five, South wins with the nine or eight, or if East plays the ten, declarer overtakes with the jack.

Next the king of clubs is led and overtaken with the ace on the board. Another trump is played from dummy, trapping East's king, and declarer wins his game, losing only three spade tricks.

Art Is Worth Fighting For, Gatz Asserts

Led by a dynamic personality who believes that art, as well as liberty, is worth fighting for, the Second American Congress for Aesthetics will be opened tonight at Catholic University.

Dr. Felix M. Gatz, president of the congress and who can discuss abstract painting and baseball with equal finesse, marshalled a press conference yesterday and said a thing or two about this aesthetics business.

"'Is it right?' I asked myself, 'to be so much concerned with art in these times,'" said Dr. Gatz, a Hitler-hating American citizen of German birth who is head of the department of music and art at the University of Scranton (Pa.).

"My answer is 'yes, it is right.' Certainly by ignoring art we are not helping to win the war. We older men, we who are too old to fight, it is best that we continue to teach art and what is true in art. We are fighting for not only political and religious freedom but for freedom to search for the truth."

If that gives the impression Dr. Gatz is a decrepit, bearded specimen, it should be corrected. He looks like he is in his early fifties. His pretty wife, who is a sort of girl Friday, he met when she was a student in one of his classes.

As he discourses on public appreciation of art she interrupts frequently to correct pronunciation —"MET-a-phor, dear, not met-A-phor"—and to interpose little philosophical nuggets of her own.

Mrs. Gatz cast a critical, but approving, eye upon her husband as he rose to give a short impersonation of the dancer, Martha Graham, launching into the address she will give at the congress Saturday morning. The mimicry was complete, down to the momentary display of calf which Miss Graham will present.

The American Society for Aesthetics was founded in 1939 by Dr. Max Schoen, the present and original vice president; Prof. Alexander Kostellow, secretary, and Dr. Gatz. Its first congress was held the same year at the University of Scranton.

It was in 1937, while attending a meeting of the same nature in Paris, that Dr. Gatz conceived the idea of having such congresses in this country. Not only did the plan bear fruit but a society was formed as well, pledged to sponsor a symposium on aesthetics every three years.

"Art," he says, "is an island in the sea of reality. It does not deal with life as do the sciences. Its center of gravity is different. It is a world apart, with a significance of its own."

What might vulgarly be described as "an all-star program" has been arranged for the congress, opening at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in McMahon Hall at Catholic University and continuing through Saturday afternoon.

Speakers will include Padraic Colum, the poet; Dr. Otto Ortman, former director of the Peabody Conservatory; Miss Margaret Webster, stage director and author, and the French literary pair, Dr. Jacques Maritain and his wife, Raissa.

P. U. C. Rules On Utility Stock Deal

Underwriters of the sale of 40,000 shares of Washington Gas Light Co. $5 cumulative preferred stock were ordered by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday to take 15,000 shares over and above those purchased by common stock holders under preemptive right.

No commission may be charged for shares sold to stockholders, but the dealers are to get $3.50 per share for all other sales. The stock will sell for $100 per share.

The PUC order was given as final approval of the Gas Light Co.'s petition to issue the stock, with the competitive bidding ruling waived. The Commission approved the issuance and waiver, dependent upon final approval of the agreement between the company and nine local investment houses which are to underwrite the sale.

Under the terms of the agreement presented at the time of the public hearing on April 10, the underwriters were to guarantee only the sale of 20,000 shares less whatever were taken by the common stockholders, and were to receive a commission of $1.50 per share on sales to stockholders.

The agreement also provides an "out market" clause to be effective on May 12.

100 Middies To Wed After Graduation

Approximately 100 midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy are expected to say "I do" to their O. A. O. (one and only) in the three days following graduation exercises there on June 19.

Dan Cupid alone was not responsible. Three weeks ago Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox announced that members of the class may marry on graduation day rather than waiting until two years after receiving their commissions, as has been the rule in the past.

This will be the first World War II class to enjoy the privilege.

The colorful events of June Week will be climaxed for six midshipmen on graduation day when they follow one another with clocklike regularity into the ivy-covered chapel on the grounds to emerge under an arch of swords shortly after as married ensigns.

However, the Rev. William N. Thomas, chaplain of the Academy said the ceremonies will be "at least an hour apart in the interest of dignity."

Graduation will end at noon. Promptly at 2:30 p. m. the first marriage will begin, he said. In all, 25 middies have said they will be married in the chapel, either immediately after graduation or in the two days following.

The other 75 midshipmen expected to wed will be married in other places a short time after graduation.

The Rev. Thomas said, "I do not think even the World War saw anything comparable. After, all, a hundred marriages represents one-sixth of the entire class. That is a tremendous proportion to be married in a three-day period."

West Point reported a similar rush to the altar. Cadets there have always been permitted to marry the day following graduation. However, this rule has been lifted permitting them to marry on their graduation day to allow a little longer honeymoon before going to preliminary war stations.

Navy Offers High School Graduates A Chance to Fly

High school graduates now may qualify to become aviation officers in the United States Navy or Marine Corps under a new plan of recruiting approved by the Navy Department.

It makes the first time the Navy has offered young men with only a secondary school education the chance for flight training leading to a commissioned officer status. Candidates between at least 18 years old and under 27 may apply. Recruiting will begin throughout the country next Monday. Those successfully completing the course will receive commissions as ensigns in the Navy or second lieutenants in the Marine Corps.

Qualified candidates will be sent to one of the aviation induction centers at the Universities of Iowa, Georgia, North Carolina, or at St. Mary's College, California, for three months of training. After that they will be sent to other bases.

During the training period, candidates will be paid according to rating. Aviation cadets get $75 a month, plus subsistence and uniforms. After receiving commissions, they receive $205 a month, plus allowances.

Hoist Operator Found Guilty In Death of Workman Here

Carl C. McCraney, 45-year-old construction hoist operator, was found guilty of manslaughter last night by a District court jury that had weighed his case for six hours.

McCraney was charged with causing the death of Will Hines, Negro workman, who was fatally injured a year ago when a hoist that the defendant was operating on a Park Road construction job plummeted four stories to the ground.

Testimony produced by Prosecutor Bernard Margolius showed that McCraney had stopped the platform at the fourth floor of the structure and had supposedly secured it there.

However, when Hines stepped on it to remove a wheelbarrow, it was alleged, the machine plunged earthward. Margolius charged that McCraney was under the influence of liquor at the time and was guilty of gross negligence—both in releasing the safety catch too soon and in failing to stop the platform before it hit the ground.

He told the jurors that McCraney was charged with a grave responsibility as a hoist engineer, and that the workmen had to rely upon his vigilance for their safety.

As a result of the jury's verdict, which Justice F. Dickinson Letts was summoned back to court at 7 p. m. to receive, McCraney now faces a possible prison term of 3 to 15 years.
